apparent upon his removal to Chicago, and he was removed to a national hospital to Washington D. C. A little more than two years ago he was discharged because of disability, and removed to Ashland, hoping to better his health.

Major Gandee is survived by his wife, four sons and one daughter. Funeral services were held this afternoon from the J. P. Dodge and Sons Funeral Chapel. Interment was in the Mountain View cemetery.

A firing squad from Battery B Oregon National Guard attended the funeral and accorded full military rites at the grave.

even younger than his 30 years. There is no strut in his manner, and he wouldn't be picked out in the street car for a senator.

But sit down and talk with the friendly young chap. Look into his assured, cool, blue-gray eyes and listen to his clear-cut speech. There are traces of the boy remaining, but they are well buried in the mind trained by eight years' steady handling of senatorial affairs, both in his father's office and in campaign. "I realize," he tells you, "that because of my father's name and my youth and things of that sort, I am getting a lot more attention than is actually warranted. And that is an incubance rather than a help. What I hope is that I may stay out of that artificial light and may
