TOWN PUMP IS YIELDING GAS

JAMESTOWN, N. D., (UP)—Perversity of the old town well at Robinson, 75 miles northwest of here, which suddenly started yielding oil where only water was desired or expected, and persistence of more recently drilled wells which refuse despite prayers and exhortations to produce anything but pure water, has created considerable dissatisfaction in this corner of North Dakota.

For twenty years the old town well at Robinson, a cavern 600 feet deep, provided a never-failing supply of clear, cold water. It was the best drinking water in the village and 500 inhabitants all of Robinson, depended upon it.

But one day the bucket emerged from the well containing a liquid contaminated with a foreign substance, later identified as oil. The contamination continued with increasing intensity until finally it was the purest mixture of gasoline and petroleum ever found in the United States.

The brown fluid tested 62.8 percent. Only twice before in America oil history had petroleum in its natural state attained a test of 60 percent. Geologists called upon to investigate said Robinson's oil supply filtered through a formation of quicksand and alkali which accounted for its unusual purity.

The oil continued to form a coating over the water in the town well and ruined utterly the formerly faithful source of supply. Many residents bemoaned the conditions. But foreigners with little interest in the quality of Robinson's water, reacted differently to the news of oil where all projects started immediately to appear.

Notable among the venture launched was that of A. C. Townley, organizer and head of the Nonpartisan league during its political heyday. On a five-acre tract near Robinson he caused to be erected a derrick towering 85 feet into the air and around it a 15-foot board fence.

It was rumored outside the in accessible enclosure that $20,000 worth of casing and equipment was at the foot of the $5,000 derrick and that Townley was spending a total of $100,000 in his effort to tap the source of contamination of the Robinson town well.

Thus far, however, there has been no report of oil anywhere in the state except what accumulates in the well. Only pure water has been discovered under the crust of earth in Robinson and its environs. Other projects than those already started are planned. Hope for those to come and annoyance with those already started runs high.

VIGILANTES PUT STOP TO BANK ROBBERING

INDIANAPOLIS, (UP)—Bank bandits are experiencing a lean winter this year in Indiana. Only two small robberies occurred in the fall and early winter.

Thorough organization for the pursuit of bandits is responsible for the slump in the business, according to the protective division of the Indiana Bankers' Association.

Throughout last winter and spring daring robberies were successfully executed in every section of the state with such rapidity that it appeared local authorities were unable to cope with the situation.

Officials of the state bankers association held council of war as the total of the loot mounted toward the hundred thousand dollar mark in the early summer.

Vigilance committees were organized in practically every county in the state to meet the emergency. Members of the committees were armed, trained in marksmanship and given police powers.

Former service men volunteered as members of the committees and a shipment of arms was received from the war department.

Orders to shoot to kill were issued to all the vigilantes.

Quick methods of spreading the alarm of robbery were worked out by the state association in co-operation with the telegraph and telephone companies.

The county bankers' associations posted heavy rewards for the capture of a bank bandit.
