NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(U. P.)—The friend you can't forget—because she sent you a Christmas gift which you failed to reciprocate—may be remembered on Valentine's day. Why not send her one of those lovely little handkerchiefs that are heart-shaped and edged with a border of wide gold or silver metal lace? They're made of chiffon in bright colors and are about the prettiest things one can carry with the evening gown. There's one in apricot shade edged in gold lace and another for the matron made of black chiffon trimmed in silver lace. They cost little and can be made in an evening.

Sunnier climes are calling for bathing suits. The one-piece affairs are not nearly so important at present as the little dress-shaped velvets and tafetas. One of orange velvet is made with slender bodice and petaled skirt and worn with an orange turban which goes over the bathing cap of rubber. Velvet is less perishable than tafeta as water does not seem to rot it so quickly. It need not be pressed after wearing since the nap comes up in shaking the garment when it is partially dry.

Red for gloomy days is very popular in New York. One of the most effective costumes worn on a rainy day this week was an ensemble of red woolen material. The long coat was made slender to the hipline and these flared to a full circular hemline which was edged in a band of gray fox. The standing collar which buttoned high about the throat was of fox as were the cuffs of the tight-fitting sleeves. A draped turban of brocaded silver cloth, gray pumps and hostery completed the cheerful rainy day effect. Red raincoats of transparent rubberized silk are popular with the younger element on dark, rainy days. Red likewise rules supreme for skating purposes this season.

ENGORES

(Written for the United Press)
NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(U. P.)—Styles are constantly repeating themselves so that a fad is gone one season and back again the next. If we keep a garment long enough it's bound to come in vogue again. For instance, muffs. Several of the very smartest women on Fifth Avenue are carrying them these cold days. There's a newness about them that immediately attracts attention. One made of chocolate brown cloth has a double ruffle of the material at either end with bands of mink fur joining ruffle to muff. It is lined in scarlet velvet. With a mink wrap a young Miss chose a tiny balloon-shaped muff of mink and a mink handbag.

The newest way of wearing a band of rhinestones about the hair at evening functions is just the way our mothers wore such bandeaux. They are worn back towards the crown of the head and not over the forehead as we have been accustomed to wear them. Both straight and curly locks are seen with this quaint bandeau placement.

Flowered chiffon lingerie recalls the days when we wore flowered organdy undies. Some of us can't recall them but they were colorful little affairs that girls gave as wedding gifts in other days. This season the background is invariably white with large floral designs in colors. They are soft and very effective and the bride of January will appreciate a gift of these printed sets which include bloomers, vest and night gown.

The draped crown that is seen on nearly every hat in Paris is an old style with new inspirations. The newest drape is where the crown folds in a high tuck at the back although every type of crown drape is seen.

And lest we forget the days when families had monogrammed playing cards we must mention that fact that all smart women are having decks of vid-backed cards monogrammed to match their monogrammed bridge scores. Department stores do this work in their stationery departments.

Insurance Day

What a heart-full of love and gratitude surges forth on this, the fourth day of Thrift Week—the day when men think seriously of Insurance.

We, the mothers and the children, the dependents of the city find no adequate words for thanking those whose wise generosity will act as constant, protective Guardianship.

For, whatever the kind of insurance—its strong arms are thrown about us. Fire may take our roof from our heads without building another to take its lace; the breadwinner of the family, if taken suddenly from us, will live in spirit, his foresight keeping us from dire want and inexpressible embarrassment.

For wives and mothers will be cared for, children educated and life will flow steadily on, in its material necessities, despite the shock of great grief.

Insurance is the great mother, the humanitarian friend in times of accident, death, fire, the rage of the elements—whatever untoward betides. And, as is the way of motherhood, it is first to be at your side in hours of extremity.

The thought of Insurance Day is to act, almost inspirationally NOW, that each man may sit in the quiet of his home, at eventide, conscious of having not only performed his duty by those he loves, but given expression to the most practical form of all Thrift.
