GIVE ALL TO GOD—"And the angel of Jehovah called unto him out of heaven, and said, * * * Lay not thy hand upon the lad, * * * for how I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son * * * from me." Gen. 22: 11-13.
PRAYER—Help us Lord to withhold nothing from Thee, for Thou didst give Thine only begotten Son to us that we might live and not die.

PERSUADE CONGRESS ON THIS BILL.

The strong position that the members of the Oregon congressional delegation are making to have the Johnson-Linberger bill for a million dollars forest fire fighting fund included in the national budget, should have the earnest support of Oregon "interests" of every sort. The farmers should be behind it, for it is of special interest to farmers. The city dwellers, especially those whose humble happiness depends upon the smooth operation of industry in the congested districts, should be for it. The managers of large business connections should be for it. For the maintenance of our forest crops is fundamental to the interest of all in Oregon and to all those of us Americans out of Oregon who want Oregon preserved for a productive part of the Union or as an objective for tourists.

Let no one think that the fight being made at Washington is against the budget principle in national administration. Oregon, like all other states should respect and strengthen the budget.

But this does not mean a literal respect for the opinion of the director of the budget in accepting or omitting some item from his list. Nor does it mean that Congress should have no opportunity to amend the budget bill as presented in committee or on the floor.

The purpose of the budget is not to hamper Congress. It is to inform and to caution Congress.

The budget is an orderly arrangement of the demands of the various departments of government, and of the suggestions for expenditures as they interlace with the routine operations of government.

Under the old system, or lack of system, every department intrigued to get its own bills through Congress. The members of Congress worked on them without any sense of proportion. The departments that had active lobbyists or committees got their bills through first. Those that were not such good managers came in late, and either had their bills rejected or seriously cut, or their proposals added injuriously to an already overburdened treasury.

That the director of the budget this time has not seen the importance of having the appropriation made for protection of national forests does not show the bill is wrong. It merely shows that the director is not acquainted with the facts of national responsibility in these western areas.

EXTRAVAGANT TAXES

Business men of Akron, Ohio, alarmed at rapid increase of state, county and city taxes, are seeking to form a national organization to oppose and call a halt on unnecessary state and municipal taxation. The move is based upon the fact that reduction in federal taxes is more than offset by "increases in spending of states, counties and cities."

Commenting on the situation, the Los Angeles Times says: "While the federal government is reducing taxes and cutting expenses the states and cities are piling up the assessments at an ungodly rate. Over $1,000,000,000 more of tax-free securities will be offered for investment during 1926, in spite of floods of bonds already out. Such bonds in the end draw materially from revenues of the general government. All the states were tarred with the same stick. In the way of the public improvements the luxuries of another day are the necessities now. The people are extravagant and the tax-eaters are leading the parade. The note of warning sounded from the White House goes unheard. The example set by the federal government is wasted in the states and cities."

How fast the land develops. There are more millionaires in jail now than there were at large in 1890.—Port Arthur News.

Hunting for Solid Ice

For next, ultimately he brought up in the Argentine Republic—off a 1925 military map.

He's saved a lot of money. According to a local daily newspaper, he has a financial advantage of a number of thousand and they turned out well.

At last he has been out as an importer of North American films for Argentine theatres. His business grew until he became something of a magnate. As John D. Rockefeller would reckon, he isn't rich, but I imagine he could draw his check for two or three hundred thousand.

Parent-Teacher Notes

Our main interest in the children who are near and dear to us is to give them a fair chance in the race of life—start them off on the right foot. That is what education really is.

But are we actually doing this job in the best possible way? There are different ideas on this subject. Here is one idea from Mr. Orrin E. Lester, former director of the Savings Division of the United States Treasury. He says: "At present, school students pass through our educational system and out into the world to work practically without instruction or direction in how to start life on a sound economic basis or what the primary principles of financial success are. To give the young people of this country an intelligent understanding of how to manage their personal affairs in an orderly way is a responsibility that our educational system cannot evade. If the economic civilization of this nation is to be done in the school houses of the nation and not on the soap boxes."

There is no subject, either economic or social, that transcends in importance the question of how the personal income of people shall be used, the teaching our children how to manage their personal affairs is, from the standpoint of public welfare, at least equal to any subject that we now have in our course of study. This is the opinion of an experienced student of economics. He goes on to say: "It is the proper function and duty of education to give young people an appreciation of how to start their lives on a sound economic basis—show them what the primary principles of success are."

The National Thrift Movement grew out of the conviction of recognized leaders that the American people ought to be given some practical help in their efforts to master money matters. Some forty national organizations are cooperating in the good work.

Because of National Thrift Week, the whole country is alive to thought on thrift throughout the month of January. More and more each year this interest is being made to extend through January into all of the other months.

The leaders of this movement realize that if this work is to perpetuate it must be placed on the most solid of foundations, and consequently the educators of our land are looked to as one of the essential keystones. The old axiom that it is hard to teach old dogs new tricks is a true one. It is hard to teach thrift to the present generation, but children can be taught very easily. If they are so taught, the generation to come will show a distinct advance.

WRITERS THANKS FROM VANUATU

People who suffered from serious diseases that started with a simple cough or cold realize the importance of checking them right at the start. W. H. Gray, Vanuatu, California, writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is wonderful for attacks of colds and coughs." Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives quick relief from coughs and colds. Buy a bottle today and keep it on hand for the slightest emergency. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sold everywhere.

WILLIAMSON'S

This composite photograph shows the late William Williamson, who was killed in the Battle of the Marston in 1141. He was the first of the Williamson family to come to Ashland, and in 1871 he was the first to be buried in the city.

BODY OF MAN FOUND IN SLOUGH

PORTLAND, Jan. 21. (AP)—The body of a man floating on Columbia slough, was found today. Police believe the man to be a murder victim. The skull was fractured over the left temple, as though he had been slugged. There were no means of identification on the body, and it was estimated that the man had been dead about ten days.

SAP AND SALT
BY BERT MOSES

A little friend is more of a menace than a big enemy.

It is not advantages, but disadvantages, that make men great.

The road to ruin is necessarily wide because there is so much traffic on it.

A title never honored a man, but occasionally we find a man who honors a title.

It seems inevitable that any man who builds up a future must pull himself down doing it.

Modern fiction has this to recommend it: You need not read it because you know beforehand just what it contains.

Heck says: "One sure sign of a bum cigar is when it carries the name of a great man."

TOM SIMS SAYS

The only reliable antique dealer is the merchant who sells eggs cheaply.

What the world needs is an alarm clock that will say, "You'll lose your job if you don't get up."

Sometimes the answer to "Why girls leave home" is "So they can smoke a cigaret."

Honesty may be the best policy, but telling the truth isn't always exactly polite.

You hear a lot of talk about self-made men, but all men are that.

Experts think the old-fashioned dance is coming back, but we don't.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES F. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Just for variety I nominate W. F. Gauke as General Pershing's successor at the head of the Tacna-Arica commission.

The trouble with nearly every one this government sends to South America is a complete unfamiliarity with South Americans. Gauke knows all about them.

Picking a man for such a job on account of his qualifications is unprecedented of course. Still, it might be tried as an experiment.

Gauke's from North Dakota originally.

He was a farm boy. Then he worked in a gambling house. He was postmaster, somewhere or other, out west. Finally he gravitated into the agricultural machinery business.

One of the big farm machinery houses sent him to Russia, as a mechanic. His travels took him all over Europe and the
