Jaeger Says Cities Must Help Selves

That a golf course is absolutely necessary in order to keep the tourist in the city more than over night, was stressed by Jaeger. "Take myself for instance," he said. "I came here, intending to get over the Siakl-yous last night. Then Mr. Price informed me that we could play a little golf at Medford and after leaving the remainder of my party here, we went 13 miles back over our course, to play golf. Most tourists won't do that more than once. And while I was playing golf, the rest of my party were viewing the city, and spending a little money here," he continued.

Exploitation of the lithia springs and the lithia water in this section were also recommended by Jaeger, as one means of stopping the tourist for two or three days.

"We have had the same problem in Portland, only on a larger scale. It has been the problem of the state for years, but I believe we are on the road to successfully solving it," Jaeger concluded.
