CO-OPERATIVE OREGON

The semi-annual convention of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce and the conference of secretaries of the local chambers in the state, arouse new interest in the state wide development which must come through state wide co-operation. It is planned to make a survey of markets, industries and industrial opportunities; and to give general publicity to the facts that may be learned.

The effort to persuade Oregon people to buy Oregon goods has continued fitfully over a period of years. Most people recognize the soundness of the theory that Oregon industries will thrive and bring community prosperity when they are patronized, and that much of that patronage must come from local people. Banquets and luncheons have shown the rich menu that unassisted Oregon provides. Exhibits and fairs have demonstrated, comforts and luxuries are made in Oregon.

With all the appeals that set these facts before them, we see California prunes on sale in Portland markets, eastern blankets on Oregon beds, Grand Rapids furniture in our houses. It is of course unreasonable to expect people to sacrifice their own interests for community loyalty. There would be no economy in attempting to make Oregon self supporting, in the sense that it should supply all its own needs, but there are many articles made or grown in Oregon that deserve the preference of Oregon people. That they are not actually so preferred always by purchasers is the result rather of carelessness and inattention, than from any other reason.

Plans were developed at this conference to reach the retail clerks, who come directly into contact with the customers. They will be asked to push Oregon products wherever possible, and so to overcome the inertia which buys the usual thing that bears a familiar trademark and hesitates to make a change. This is a practical business-like way to get results. A word of reminder at the time of purchase is better than an hour of oratory at a banquet. If every store in every community will give worthy Oregon products a fair chance for the trade, with just a word of encouragement, it will help a lot.—Portland Telegram.

HEAD TAX ON TOURISTS

Some indignation has been expressed over the recent action of the Greek government in levying a head tax of $5 on tourists. Hereafter, if any passionate admirer of things anciently Hellenic desires to gaze on the parthenon, or to walk on the ground made sacred by Socrates or look across the water to sea-born Salamis, or to wander over to Marathon or where the priestess consulted the Delphic oracle, he must pay for it.

But hold! Has not this sort of thing been long given the approval of custom?

Every palace and nearly every shrine in Europe that any American wants to see has long had a head tax. It may be only a shilling levy for the guide, but whatever it is, a part of it at least goes to headquarters, for maintenance or rehabilitation or for the costs of administration. Even in Oregon, we pay to visit certain historic spots.

And why should not those of us who are curiosity seekers pay the necessary expenses of what is a benefit and an enrichment?

Greece needs the money, bad enough. What is $5 as an entrance fee to the museum of the ages?

They say that Senator Stanfield's political manager is making a hurried visit in Washington, due to his worry because the senator has delayed the writing of his platform. Some say that the Baker incident is one plank which is already written.

A motorist left his car at a local garage to be washed. "Wash all except the number plates," he stated. He had 1925 plates on his car.

The new electric sign which will be erected on the Hotel Ashland will be another sign of Ashland's progress.

UNABLE RESCUE CREW, PACIFIC STORM FIERCE

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 2.—(U.P.)—The high seas, which threatened to engulf the water-logged schooner, Ecola, today prevented the crew of the vessel from being taken aboard the oil tanker Los Alamos, according to messages by radio received here.

The tanker was standing by floundering at nightfall, but this morning she was lost sight of. Later a disabled vessel was sighted and the Los Alamos drew near again.

Standing by the Ecola. The captain wants to abandon the ship, but the sea is too rough. Winds are of hurricane force. Captain Olson of the Los Alamos radioed to the General Petroleum company offices. The schooner is in distress off Point Caballo. The vessel sailed a week ago from the Columbia river.

Mr. Harrell, son of Joe Harrell, proprietor of the Lithia Springs garage, received notice from Commissioner W. C. The examination, which was held January 9, was a competitive one and Mr. Harrell was thus honored by winning the commissioner's recommendation.

FIVE TRAVELERS WITH BIRTHDAYS MONDAY AT HOTEL

Yesterday an incident of rather unusual coincidence occurred when five travelling men sitting in the lobby of the Lithia Springs hotel, each declaring that yesterday was their birthday.

"I would like to be home today, as it's my birthday," one of the men, who was far away from home, remarked, as he was waiting to go to the next town. "This is my birthday, too," another one stated, and this started the deluge of three other birthday announcements.

This will probably not happen again for hundreds of years, one of them remarked.
