ASHLAND'S FAME SPREADS AFAR

A news dispatch from Salem yesterday gave forth the information that Ashland last year had registered more non-resident motor vehicles than any other city of the state.

In round numbers, this means that approximately 100,000 visitors from other states stopped first in Ashland, the southern gateway to Oregon, as they motored up the Pacific highway from the south.

It is here in Ashland that a majority of the visitors gain their first impression of Oregon, and because Ashland and her people were prepared to greet these visitors and take care of them properly and courteously, the state as a whole has benefited immeasurably.

To the auto tourist a city or a community is judged largely by the auto camping facilities which are provided. The fame of Ashland's auto camp has spread to the four corners of the country.

It is a broad statement, perhaps, but nevertheless true, that Ashland's auto park has acquired the reputation of being the finest in the United States.

Among those who halted here during 1925 are many who will cherish the memory of Ashland and her Lithia park. When spring and summer come again they will answer the call of the open road and Ashland, without question, will again find an important place in their itineraries.

The fame of Ashland's auto park was gained largely from auto tourists who rested here and marveled at its beauty. They returned to their homes in the east, the north and south and said to their friends:

"You don't want to pass up Ashland, Oregon; they have the finest auto park in the world!"

Such fertile seeds as these are bound to reap a harvest. The present year promises to break all records for Ashland and her justly famous auto park.

THE COMING OF THE HOME BUILDER

One thousand people own the 14,000 acres of irrigation land within the boundaries of the Grants Pass Irrigation district. This makes the average home unit now only 14 acres, a figure that is being rapidly reduced as the larger tracts still held are being subdivided.

The Grants Pass district is attracting the best class of settler. The family that wishes a home amid the kindest of natural surroundings where the acre will produce an abundant crop of the higher priced fruits, berries and vegetables, is coming, and development here today is more rapid than in any other agricultural section of the west.

One of the things that has aided in settlement of the Grants Pass district has been the holding of land prices at a reasonable level. There has been little or no inclination on the part of the land owner to spring prices, and price will usually be found lower than value.

appearing before the influx of the home builders. Another year will find the Grants Pass district one hundred percent settled.—Grants Pass Courier.

Over in Klamath Falls there is a musical trio composed of a deputy sheriff, a county jail inmate and a club leader who manufacture harmony for tired court house employes.

It is to be hoped that the golf club movement will be a success. A good golf course on or near the Pacific highway, south of the city, will be another valuable exhibit in the list of attractions which Ashland has to offer the auto tourist.

Ashland people are meeting with much success in their determination to revive the old-fashioned dances. It is fortunate that a man with the pep and vision of Arthur H. Foster of the Portland chamber of commerce has offered his aid in promoting these dances locally.

The boys of Ashland high school are winning their basketball games this season with almost unflinching regularity. Here's hoping they never lose again this year.

We don't quite remember what the groundhog did, but everybody ought to be satisfied with this brand of weather.

It is easy for even old people to change their opinions if they can get a little on the side for doing it.

BIG EAGLE TRAPPED

SONOMA, Cal., Feb. 9. — (AP) — A gray eagle recently trapped near Jack London's home in the Valley of the Moon near here, measured 84 inches form wing tip to wing tip and 35 inches in spread of tail.

STEWART'S

By CHARLES E. STEWART NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Alexander P. Moore, just back from Spain, where he spent several years as American ambassador at King Alfonso's court, speaks extremely well of Gen. Primo de Rivera, who ran the country, as dictator, during most of Moore's stay in the land of the dons.

Spain suffered from three dreadful complaints:

- 1. A long-drawn-out war in Africa. 2. Too many administrative officials, mostly no good. 3. A parliament which met periodically and passed laws and passed laws until no Spaniard knew where he was "at."

Rivera wished the African war mainly onto France, which is having her troubles with it now. He cut administrative personnel to the bone. He got along without parliament. It was all very high handed, no doubt, but it worked.

But laws? With no parliament, who was to attend to them?

Why, the cabinet, to be sure, of which Rivera was boss—and an extremely positive one.

That cabinet worked overtime on the code. Moore couldn't help noticing it—Rivera was so hard to get to when he had official business to transact with him, he was so busy, toiling with laws.

"What in the world," wondered Moore, "can a country that's snowed under already, up to its neck in laws, want with more and more?"

So one day he met Rivera and asked him.

"Moore!" said the dictator, astonished. "What do you think we're doing? We're repealing laws. And it's going to take us two years yet to repeal all that ought to be repealed."

NEW COPCO PAPER TO BE ISSUED

Two articles concerning the development of the California-Oregon Power Company in Siskiyou are featured in the January issue of "Bylesby Management," which made its first appearance last month and which will serve with the "Vult" in giving the power and light company general publicity.

Photographs of the largest wood stove pipe in the world, used at Copco No. 2 and No. 3's new power plant are given in one article while the other is devoted to the motion picture activity of the Copco organization. It brings out the novel application of motion pictures to various public utility lines of endeavor as instituted by Copco. An illustration showing one of the finest Copco county fair exhibits, in which motion pictures played to be a significant attraction, was used in connection with the article.

"Bylesby Management," published by H. H. Bylesby & Company, recent buyers of the California-Oregon Power Company, is an attractive monthly publication devoted to the interests of the customers, stockholders and employees of the Bylesby properties throughout the United States.

President Leaves Forward The following "forward" by President J. J. O'Brien strikes the keynote of this publication.

"To the Members of the Bylesby Organization:

"More than 20,000 persons, including ourselves, have supplied capital to provide the properties, worth not less than $750,000,000 which are entrusted to our administration. These properties are devoted to vital public service and represent a responsibility both to public and investors which every member of the organization should regard as sacred.

"The standards under which we have reached a high position in the business world are exacting and must not be lowered. Continued improvement is the price of continued success. Toward the proper fulfillment of our obligations tion "Bylesby Management" it is hoped, will prove an instrument of great usefulness."

They Charleston, Regardless

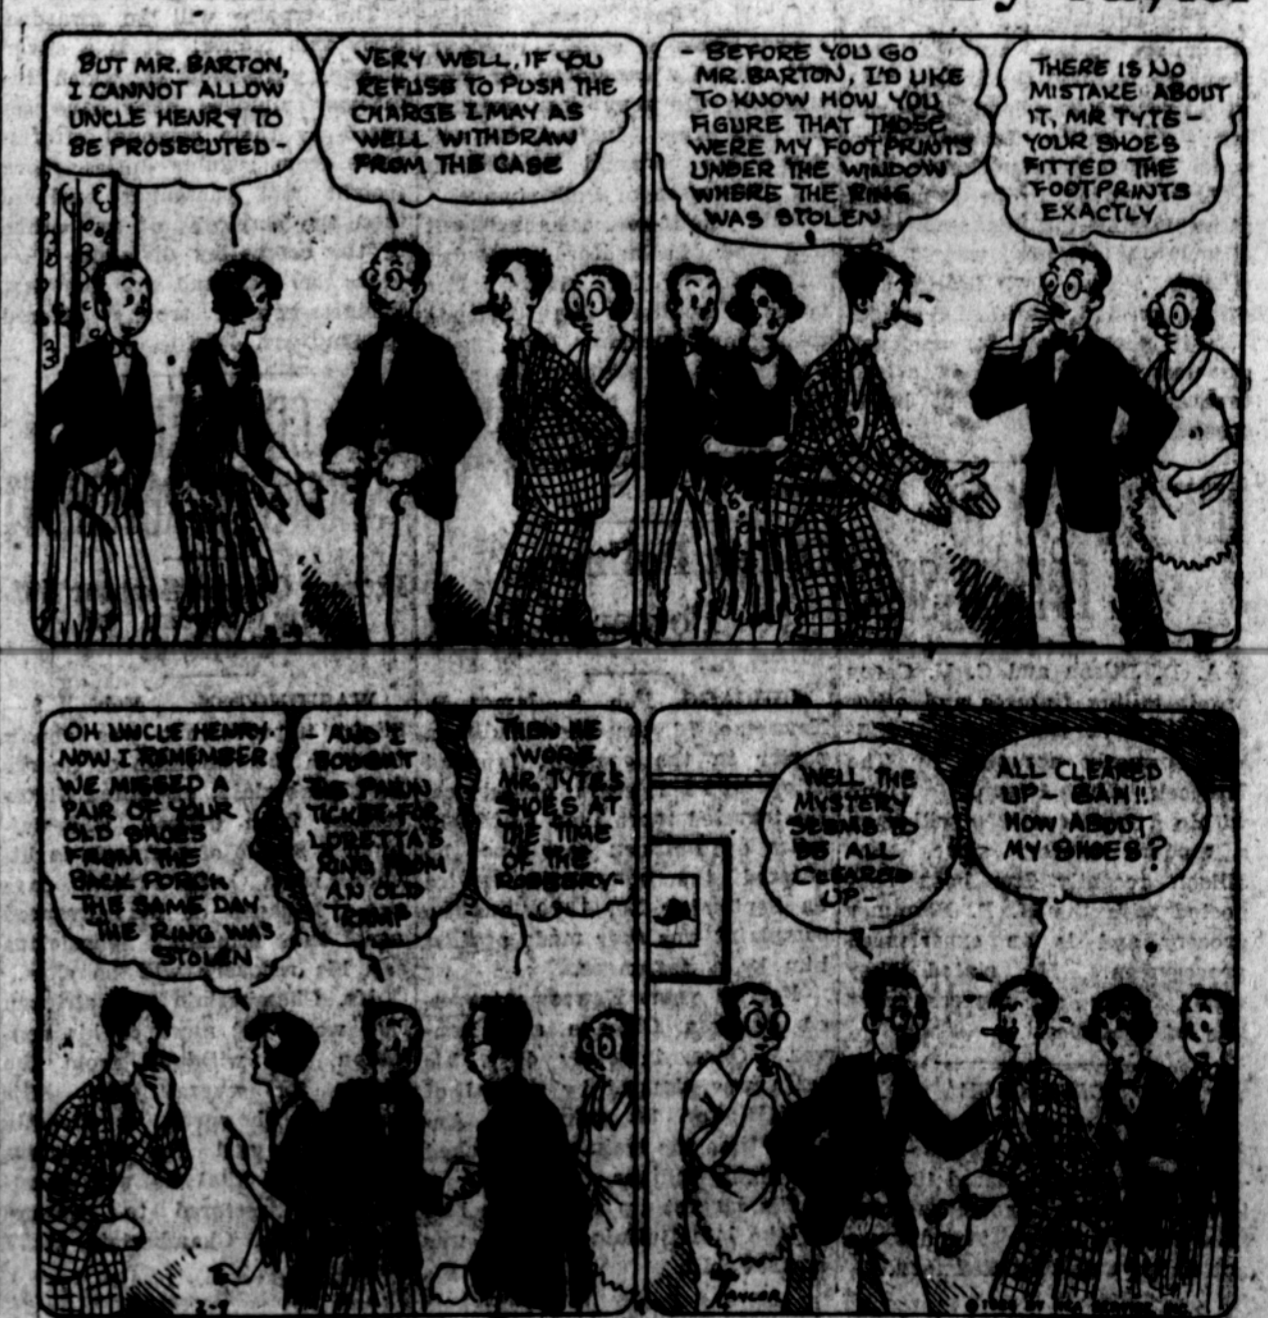

Calahan and the Charleston are both all the rage in Wichita, Kan. So too is the waltz. The waltz and the Charleston are dancing the one and dancing the other. They mix very well, they say.
