TARIFF AND THE FARMER

The old familiar falsehood continues to be repeated, that "farmers buy under high tariff prices and sell in almost free trade markets."

President Coolidge, in his recent Chicago address, made complete refutation of the charge that the tariff is directed both ways to the detriment of the farmer.

The facts found in the tariff act itself show that the large proportion of things the farmer consumes are free from duty, and the large proportion of things he sells are heavily protected.

What do the free trade advocates want done with the tariff? Do they want wool to compete with free wool from abroad! Do they want free trade in fruit and dairy products?

The President showed from the records that dutiable goods which the farmer consumes are and 12 per cent of No one hears the word 'Damn our total imports and farm expenditures are increased at often as the telephone girl.

only 1.3 per cent by these duties. The free trader would save the farmer this 1.3 per cent of tariff and ruin the farmer's home market by reducing farm prices and lowering standards of living on farms. by subjecting him to unrestricted free trade.

FROM SWADDLING CLOTHES TO TROUSERS

Outside the realm of fancy there is nothing in modern Science so amazing as the rapid development of radio. It has jumped overnight from swadding clothes into trousers and in four years has passed through the field of adventure to a public utility of importance, and a social force that permeates every part of our daily life.

Largely employed as a medium of entertainment in three. the beginning, it is now being used by the schools to educate, by the police in apprehension of criminals, for speedy location of missing people, weather reports, guidance of and butchers are fellers who keep ships, etc.

It has enabled the President of the United States to address approximately all the people at one time. International relations have been brought closer, and at OUT OUR WAY home it has done much to create a sense of national solidarity, even in the most remote settlements.

AIMS OF CIVIC IMPROVEMENT

The cities of Wisconsin have been scored according to the degree of progress achieved in these respects: Education, Library Work, Industry, City Planning, Town and Country Relations, Recreation, Religion, Public Administration, Social Work, Health.

It is significant that the majority of cities up to a comparatively recent period were standing pretty low on these lines. Many had no libraries, their industrial plants were antiquated the towns and the country districts around them were antagonistic, they had few or no parks and play-grounds, their public afiministration was inefficient, their social agencies failed to relieve misfortune or to offer adequate guidance to struggling people, and they spent very little money for health measures. The average city has some distance to go before it measures up to high standards in all the above ten requirements.

RUBBER SUPPLIES

The action of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce, in appropriating $10,000,000 to produce rubber supplies under the control of this country, shows that the American people will not be held up so very long by high rubber prices.

These prices will not in the end be helpful to those who have got them, because they will start a lot of competition that would not have existed had reasonable prices been asked right along. It does not pay to force prices too high on anything as these producers are likely to learn before they get thru.

Mr. Borah's attitude about our foreign relations is that he seems to consider them all poor relations.
