(Continued from page 1.) organization, and revealed to his hearers an intense earnestness on his part in his work of moulding better citizens.

Scout Activities

Homer Billings, scoutmaster of Troop No. 2, gave a complete resume of the activities of Scouting in Ashland, showed where many boys had been induced to join Sunday schools because of their association with the Scouts. Leadership, he said, was the most important factor in the work.

Y. O. N. Smith, former leader of the Hi-Y club, told of his pleasure in working with the boys of high school age and of the benefits which this organization brings to the boys. He urged that some man get into this work and assist C. V. Howell, Y. M. C. A. secretary, here.

Boys Are Speakers

The boys themselves contributed greatly to the success of the banquet. Little Carl Osser, dressed in the uniform of his organization, told of the work of the "Friendly Indians," an organization for smaller lads. Their aims, he said, were work square, play square and be square.

John Billings told of the work of himself and companions in the Pioneer Club. There are now 60 members in this organization, and they are making fine progress under the direction of Mr. Howell.

James Hartley, Boy Scout, detailed the work of the Scout organization and told of the success that is accomplished in the building of clean minds and strong bodies.

Wesley Hobbs also spoke on the work of the Scouts, and detailed the various aims of the organization and the success of the troops in living up to these ideals.

Every boy on the speaking program acquitted himself in a creditable manner. In fact, it was a revelation to hear these little fellows get to their feet and talk to their elders in such a clear and sincere manner.

A. during the past year has been the most successful in the history of the city. He said that adult leadership is now the biggest need, and urged that at least a dozen men assist in this work.

Miss Rose Atkins, high school girl, rendered two delightful cello solos which won enthusiastic applause. She was accompanied by her mother. Community singing was led by W. E. Miller.

A. E. Yount, of the state Y. M. C. A., was in attendance and introduced the chief speaker, Mr. Palmer.
