Coyote Is Choked To Death By Man

LAKESIDE, Neb., Feb. 20—When Joe Pozza of Lakeside and a woman friend were cornered here by a hunger-crazed coyote, Pozza was forced to give battle to the animal with his bare hands, according to a story being related here today. After a hard fight, Pozza succeeded in choking the animal to death. The woman's dress was badly torn in the fight.

FORMER RESIDENT CALLED BY DEATH

Interested in farming, first with the late S. W. Ferris of Hampton. Later, he owned and operated for years 640 acres of the Iowa Central Stock Farm joining the town of Allison, which farm was built up by and simultaneously with the founding of that town by the Stout family and their associates, of Dubuque.

Surviving are three brothers, David of Sac City, Iowa; James of Anderson, Indiana and Charles of Los Angeles; the widow of Minneapolis; a daughter, Mrs. A. C. Leister of Minneapolis; three sons, William C. on a ranch in Montana; John D., Sales Manager of the Kliplo Loose Leaf Co., of Mason City, and Dr. Charles K., of Chicago, now in Nice, France. The oldest son, Dr. James C., of Cedar Falls died two years ago. Former State Representative William Anderson of Hamilton County, Iowa, is a nephew.

I won't say that no beautiful woman does her own laundry work. But I will say she can't keep it up week after week for very long and retain her beauty.
