

ASHLAND STUDENTS TAKING LEADING PART AT OREGON

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Ore., Feb. 22.—(Special.)—Ashland students at the University of Oregon are particularly active in student organizations.

George Ross, a leader in the School of Business Administration is business manager of the 1926 year book, the Oregonian. Vernon McGee, a freshman in Journalism, is an advertising assistant on the business staff of the Oregon Daily Emerald, and Edith Dodge, also a freshman majoring in Journalism, is on the news staff of the Emerald. Other journalism majors registered from Ashland are Louis Beeson and Lucille Perout. Beeson was recently elected to Sigma Delta Chi, national honorary journalism fraternity.

Several students from Ashland are active in music at the university. Harry Woods, a junior in pre-medical, is president of the university orchestra and secretary of Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity. Marjorie Woods, a freshman, also registered in pre-medical, plays in the orchestra. George Barron, a freshman in the School of Music, plays saxophone in the R. O. T. C. band. Barron and Woods have been elected to Phi Mu Alpha.

Erther Church, a senior in music, is an officer in Mu Phi Epsilon, national honorary music fraternity for women. Gertrude Brown is registered as a freshman in the School of Music.

Joseph Leach, a freshman in Journalism, is on the freshman business debate team.

Other Ashland students, John Gage and George Barron were among the eighteen freshmen recently elected to To-Ko-La, honorary organization.

WETS AND DRIES TO STAGE HARD FIGHT

By MINOTT SAUNDERS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—Scandinavian countries, which for years have been wrestling with the prohibition problem, are preparing for further developments this year and both the wets and dries are rallying their forces for the fight. Both are confident of making gains, and movements in the struggle will be of interest in all countries concerned with the prohibition issue.

A general election is scheduled in Norway this year to rule definitely on the prohibition of the sale of brandy and other spirits. The prohibition element is strong and claims a certain majority in Parliament, but the wets have been conducting a vigorous campaign, which has found much support in the press.

The present Norwegian law has created more difficulties in enforcement than the Volstead Act in America. It permits the sale of wines and beer containing not more than twenty-one percent of alcohol, and under this system distilled spirits can easily be passed under the name of wine. Smuggling of spirits is widespread, although the government claims to be making headway against the illicit traffic.

For several years Sweden has been under the Bratt system of prohibition. This is a modification of the old Gothenburg system and the dry element, which once welcomed it, now looks upon it with disfavor because it does not go far enough.

Under the Bratt system the retail sale of alcoholic drinks is subjected to many restrictions, and is in the hands of special societies which must pay a certain percentage of their profits to the state. Every citizen, with the exception of drunkards, paupers and criminals, is permitted to use an order book through which he or she can purchase each month, a limited quantity of drink. This is the so-called card system.

Temperance societies dislike this system because of the possibilities for fraud. Cards may easily be exchanged, or bought by drinkers from those who do not care to use them. Also the dries claim that the system is the wrong kind of education for children, who see that their parents possess such cards and grow to believe that they should have one with their citizenship.

Sweden has local option, and many districts are now completely dry. The prohibitionists hope to gain ground through this local option, and ultimately carry the country which, like America, has its greatest wet strength in the cities.

Prohibition by law prevails in Finland and the government claims to be making progress against illicit traffic. In Denmark the drink question is governed by local option.
