UNIFORM LAWS FOR AUTOS

Three model bills to govern the licensing and operation of automotive vehicles on public highways will be submitted to the legislature in Salem next winter, under sanction of the United States department of commerce. Identical bills will be offered to other state legislatures as they convene. The measures represent the conclusions reached at the recent conference in Washington on street and highway safety.

The interstate charter of automotive traffic has developed so rapidly in recent years that the need of uniform legislation is obvious. It is a mark of sound judgment that the conference decided to reach the question entirely through state legislation in preference to the proposal of a general federal act governing interstate traffic with local statutes covering everything else.

The three proposed acts comprise a registration and certification of title act, a licensing measure for operators and chauffeurs and a statute regulating the operation of vehicles on highways. The registration act provides for a motor vehicle department or division in each state. The chief provisions of the drivers' licensing measure deals with age limits, examination of drivers and reciprocity between states. The measure covering operation fixes speed limits and deals with such matters as road rules, reckless driving, driving while intoxicated, road signs, weight limits and penalties.

Examination of existing state laws revealed that the age limits for drivers vary from 12 to 18 years. The conference recommended limits of 16 years for operators, 18 for chauffeurs and 21 for drivers of passenger-carrying vehicles. Bars are raised against licensing of habitual drunkards and narcotic addicts.

Visiting limits vary from 15 days to six months under existing state laws. The conference measure provides for complete reciprocity. For example, a tourist from a state which permits a visiting car to remain only 15 days without a local license would face a 15-day limit in Oregon, and a car from California could remain six months, since that is the rule there.

The conference provided for a maximum speed limit of 35 miles an hour, with definite restrictions covering speed at grade crossings, on curves and in business and residential districts. There are many who will maintain, and correctly, that a speed in excess of 35 miles is entirely safe under certain conditions.

Each legislature will modify the acts, undoubtedly, to suit local conditions, but it will be a fine thing if legislation governing operation of motor cars, uniform in essential details, shall be passed by all the states.

CHANGE OF AMBITIONS

Out of 189 Chicago school pupils recently questioned as to what they wanted to be, only one wanted to be president, while 10 wanted to be football stars, 11 wanted to be dancers, seven to be great travelers, etc.

The boy who thinks he would like to be president is not often heard from now, while the cash rewards in the entertainment and supporting field look more enticing to the youthful crowd. But it will be recalled that formerly many thought it would be very wonderful to hold any kind of a railroad job where you could move around from place to place.

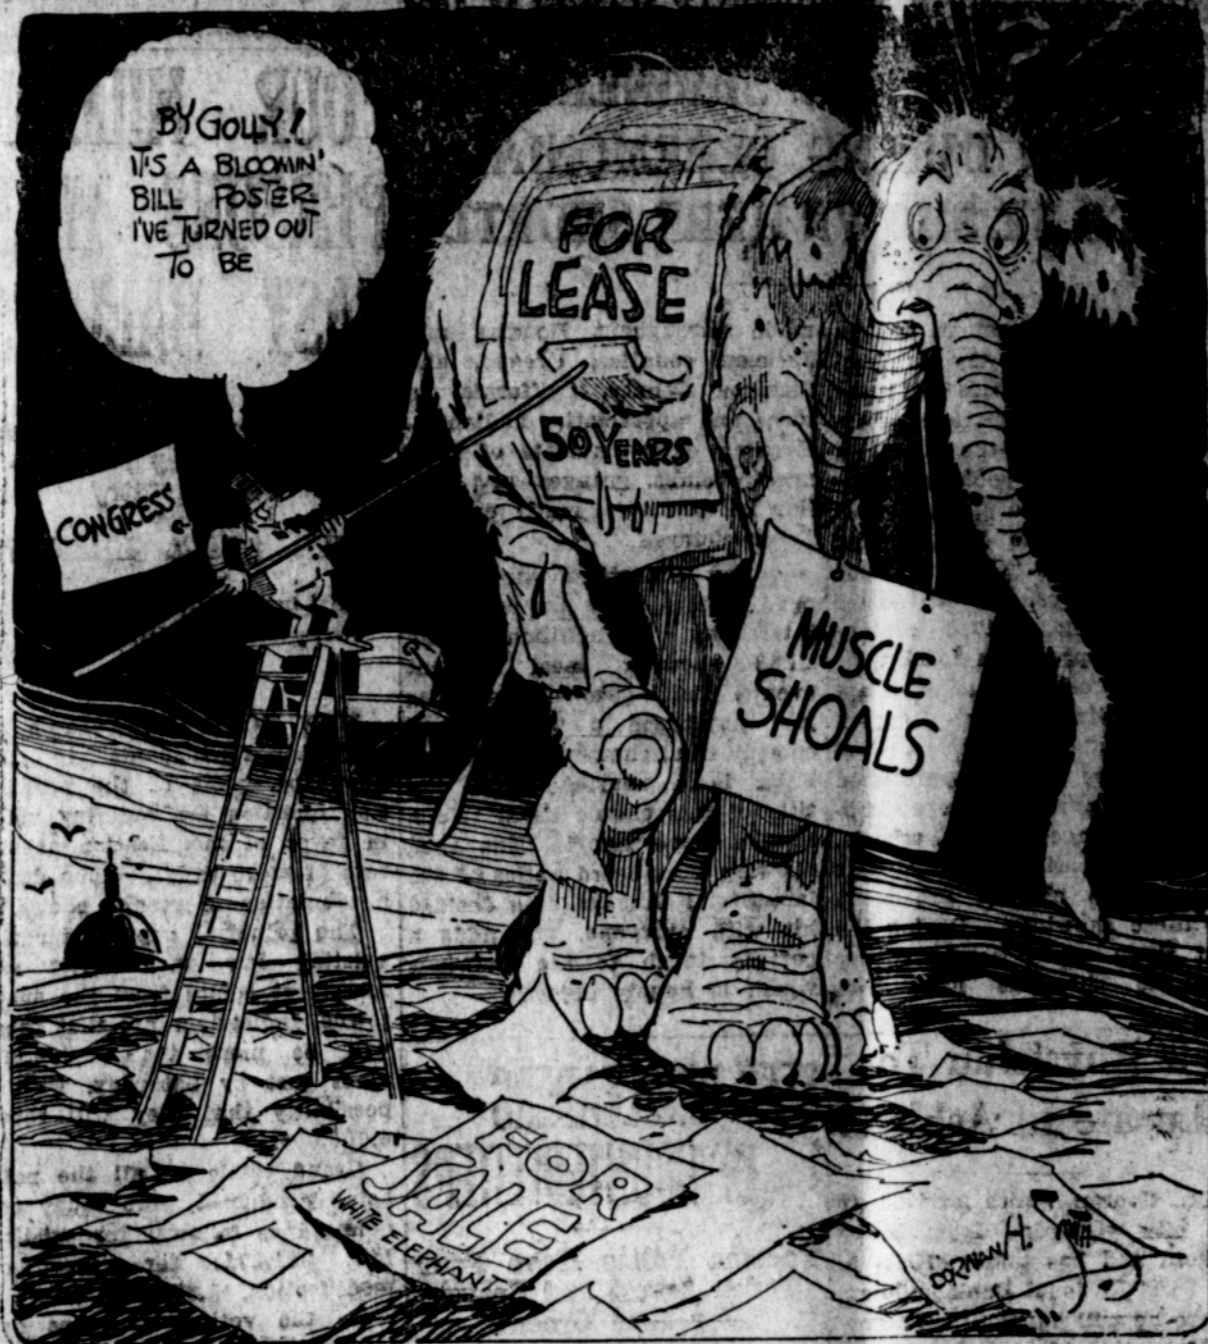

Money seems to be the great lure now. When people are offered a certain job, the first question usually is, what does it pay? It continues to lure the older ones, too. But after people go on awhile, they learn that there are many things that money cannot buy, and there are many things that people will not sell for any amount of money.

Fine thing about summer is when you get your underwear on outside in the buttons don't feel cold.

The weather's been in cold storage all winter.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER
By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Congresswoman Florence P. Kahn of California emphatically denies that she aspires to leadership of the wet bloc in the House of Representatives.

Maybe she doesn't, but there's such a thing as being drafted.

Mrs. Kahn is being talked about for the job, anyway.

Congressman John Phillip Hill of Maryland is wet leader now, but Hill is figuring on breaking into the Senate.

Besides, some of the wets have an idea there would be strategic advantages in having a woman as their standard bearer, assuming, of course, that she was a capable one, which there isn't any doubt about in Mrs. Kahn's case.

The popular impression is that women are dryer than men, on an average. A good many of them might be won over, with a woman leading the fight for dry law modification.

So the wets reason.

Mrs. Kahn, by the way, reasons otherwise.

"On the prohibition question," she told me, "women, like men, differ, with localities and groups, but I believe they average about alike, the country over."

Congressman Hill certainly isn't jealous of the talk about Mrs. Kahn, as wet leader. Indeed, Mrs. Kahn says she thinks he started it, "for a joke," as she puts it.

Mrs. Kahn's unduly modest. The wets aren't joking.

punishment," according to Gaspare Nicotri, professor of sociology at the University of Palermo in Sicily.

Nicotri, an expert criminologist, is visiting America for the purpose of studying American prison methods. He visited the Berkeley police headquarters, where August Vollmer, chief of police, has built up an organization for crime detection and prevention that has attracted attention the country over. Nicotri was impressed by what he saw there. Nicotri supports the theory that the criminal is a special type with a mind halfway between that of the lunatic and the savage.

MORE MILES TO THE GALLON

it takes in all three

What do you want from the gasoline you use? Quick starting? Power? Mileage?

If your wants are the same as those of 999 out of every 1000 motorists, your answer will be: a combination of the three without the sacrifice of any one.

That's the Associated formula; a perfect coordination of these three results—due to a correct and distinctive chain of boiling points.

Associated Gasoline is always associated with "more miles to the gallon."
