LITHIA PARK DANCING

It is the belief of The Tidings that the city council should first sound out public opinion and make careful inquiry before it passes a proposed ordinance prohibiting dancing in Lithia Park during the summer months.

The suggestion of Mayor Johnson that these dances be permitted under proper regulation and control by the city, is, in our opinion, a proper solution of the question which should meet with the approval of a vast majority of the citizens of Ashland.

The Lithia, Ashland's hospitable club, have in the past conducted these summer park dances and have exercised every care in safeguarding the functions. The Tidings believes they can be trusted to conduct them just as properly during the coming summer months if they desire to sponsor these open air dances.

It would be much better to permit the young men and women to dance in the city park under proper and careful supervision than to force the young people to go elsewhere where the surroundings might not be so congenial and so openly conducted.

It is our belief that this is a matter which should merit the careful attention of the city council before it decides on any decisive action.

MADE GOOD SHOWING

To learn how well the elementary school teachers of Chicago are succeeding in their tasks, a random "sampling" of eighth grade pupils were examined in public by seven appraisers drawn from the city postoffice, Association of Commerce, and various civic clubs. One appraiser examined their clothes, teeth, hair and general presentability. Another tested them in the use of common tools by asking them to repair a window screen. One gave a ten-minute speech on "What the Public Expects of its School" and the other pupils were asked to relate what statements had impressed them most. They were asked to look up the life of John Quincy Adams and thus demonstrate their knowledge of the use of reference devices.

Further tests given them by the qualified appraisers included: Adding up bank deposit slips; illustrating ability in penmanship, drawing, art appreciation, composition; showing literary taste, good manners; and demonstrating knowledge of music, history, civics and safety methods. The appraisers and audience reported that the pupils performed very satisfactory indeed.

HIGHWAY LIGHTHOUSES

The Automobile Association of Australia is trying out highway lighthouses in rural districts. Continuous, flashing lights, housed much as are the lights in marine beacons, are mounted on concrete bases and stand about nine feet high. They operate day and night, indicating concealed crossings, cross-roads, dangerous curves, steep grades, railroad crossings, and so on. They are visible for long distances and thus give ample warning. On the pedestals, information as to directions and mileage is plainly set forth.

Eleven of these highway beacons have been installed and more will follow if they prove as satisfactory as is anticipated.

They should be like a boon to tourists in strange regions. The accurate and legible information about directions and distance would be hailed with as great delight as the illumination in most any part of this country.

The Jackson County Public Health association is doing a splendid work in safeguarding the health of the public, and especially of children. It deserves warm support in the membership drive which got under way today. Only through the funds obtained in memberships can it carry on the good work it is doing.

Five hundred college students are applying for jobs at Crater Lake national park this year. We will agree that two months of this wonderful park would be a fitting addition to a college education.

A real highway sign is now placed opposite the new Southern Oregon normal, which goes to show that it makes a whale of a difference who handles the job.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Politicians are sneaky folks. Take 'em here in Washington. Let the least little thing happen that threatens to get 'em "in bad" with the voters "back home" and they're the worst worried crowd anybody ever saw.

My what a panic they've been in over since "George," the bootlegger in the green hat, got caught!

George—some people may know his other name, but probably not many, for he's a reticent guy—"worked" in the House of Representatives office building. He and his green lid have been familiar sights in its corridors for a long time. But the capitol police hooked him at last.

It's true he didn't stay hooked. He dropped the suitcase he was carrying when Officer Chorley hailed him, and made his getaway. Chorley knew him and thought he could find him, so he let him go, preferring to stick to the evidence in the suitcase.

As Chorley'd suspected, it proved to be the real "old stuff." Accordingly a warrant was sworn out for George. At this moment of writing it's expected he'll be brought in any minute. Most likely he'll actually be in the hoosgow, or maybe out on bond, by the time these lines see print.

From the political standpoint, the serious part of the situation is that George specialized on the congressional trade and is believed to have had more of that kind of customers than any bootlegger in Washington.

Now the question arises: Has he a list of his patrons, and, if so, is there danger it will fall into the hands of the police?

You rarely see the sign "For Sale" on a good thing.

Things we don't need are the things we work hardest to get.

Nothing finer can be said about a man than this: "He wears no label."

Honesty, in politics would probably pay if some one had the courage to try it.

How a woman does enjoy scandal if it involves circles where she has been barred out!

Life is largely devoted to passing either laws or the buck or the hat, with now and then the medicine ball.

Heck says: "Men may come and men may go, but in the case of wimmin it's generally 'no'."

Crying at movies is foolish. The same tears at home will get a woman a spring hat.

What makes this modern poetry so interesting is guessing at what it means.
