TOURIST CAMP SANITATION IN OREGON

With nearly one-half of the people having access to automobiles and consequently spending a considerable portion of their time on the highways of the nation, the importance of maintaining sanitary conditions along these same highways becomes self evident. Water supplies, sewage disposal facilities, fly protection, mosquito eradication and protection of food are of the utmost importance.

In order that the tourists may be assured of safe water and sanitary toilet facilities in the state of Oregon, regular inspection of tourist camps is now required by law. The owners of the tourist camps have agreed to comply with the rules and regulations of the State Board of Health and to co-operate with the inspection service which this department maintains through the County Health Officer. Buildings of course have been remodeled. As a matter of fact, many tourist camps maintain comfort stations equal to those found in our best hotels. Water supplies are uniformly satisfactory due to the fact that these supplies are regularly examined in the laboratory of the Oregon State Board of Health.

The following regulations concerning the sanitation of tourist camps were adopted by the State Board of Health on March 25, 1925:

Each tourist camp shall have an adequate supply of water of good sanitary quality from a source which will meet the requirements of the Oregon State Board of Health as to sanitary location, construction and operation. Common drinking cups are prohibited for use at these places.

Disposal of Excreta: Fly-tight privies or water-flushed toilets with a system of sewage disposal approved by the State Board of Health shall be provided and shall be maintained in a clean and sanitary condition. Separate toilets for men and women shall be provided; one toilet for each 25 men and one for each 25 women.

Disposal of Refuse: Supervision and equipment sufficient to prevent littering the ground with rubbish, garbage or other refuse, shall be provided and maintained. Fly-tight depositories for such material shall be provided and conspicuously located. These depositories shall not be permitted to become foul smelling or unsightly, or breeding places for flies.

Camp Sites: Every tourist camp must be located on a site that is well drained and shall be located with regard to its healthfulness.

Inspection of tourist camps is made by the County Health Officer under the supervision of the State Board of Health as often as practicable. The camps are arranged as follows: Class "A" camps complying with every regulation. Class "B" camps comply with all the regulations except those regarding some of the building restrictions. Class "C" camps are temporary permits issued to give the owners time to comply with the regulations. If the recommendations are not carried out and the camp is found in an unsanitary condition upon a second inspection, the tourist camp is then closed. This camp cannot be re-opened until the recommendations have been carried out.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S VOCABULARY

The average business man knows how to use about 10,000 words, according to Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, managing editor of Funk & Wagnall's New Standard Dictionary.

That figure is somewhat less than half the number commanded by Shakespeare, whose working knowledge included about 23,000 words. Beyond that considerable aggregate go the vocabularies of the "well-schooled physician, minister, or lawyer," each of whom can use "25,000 or more words." College graduates get along with 20,000 words, more or less, and at Princeton, for illustration, upper classmen are believed to have a range of about 16,500 words — some reason for expecting that when the young men make their marks in the business world and gather round the banquet board, they will be able to express themselves with something less usual than singing "Att-a-boy!"

Miami, (Fla.) contest to find the most polite cop failed. So would one to find a glyptodon.

In Auburn, Ala., 1000 hens laid 798 eggs in one day, leaving 202 hens that thought it was Sunday.

New York's a busy place. It is even more crowded than a village barber shop on Saturday afternoon.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER
BY CHARLES F. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Washington society is simply thrilled by news of Senator William Cabell Bruce's son, David K. Este, and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon's daughter, Alissa's, engagement.

And well may Washington society be all stirred up.

The engagement of no couple of junior royalties could have anything, in interest and importance, on this prospective alliance between a son of the super-aristocratic house of the Bruces of Baltimore and a daughter of the Mellons of Pittsburgh.

Among the socially annotated of Maryland and Virginia, the Cabells and the Bruces have been pre-eminent since early colonial days.

Senator Bruce, before his election to the upper house of Congress, was a highly successful lawyer and is extremely well-to-do but not enormously wealthy, as wealth counts today—probably less than a millionaire. It for the blueness of his blood, not the size of his bankroll, that his tribe is renowned.

Secretary Mellon, on the other hand, is one of perhaps half a dozen of the world's richest men.

Young Bruce—he's 28 to Miss Mellon's 23—is going to be a diplomat.

He's been named vice consul to Rome and it wouldn't be surprising if he got on pretty fast.

He has influential connections, even if this is a Republican administration and his father's a Democratic senator. Maybe Father-in-law-elect Mellon himself will speak a good word for him and it's rumored that Mellon has considerable drag in quarters where ministers and ambassadors are picked.

Bootlegging of Golf Balls Is Latest Wrinkle

PORTLAND, May 14.—(UP)—Golf ball bootleggers are the greatest source of worry to both private and public clubs according to club officers who have held several meetings to plan ways and means to prevent "golf ball finding."

This industry flourishes in Portland to an unusual degree, and rules prohibiting the sale of second hand balls on courses are to no avail. The ball finders stand outside the fence and trade with players who are making the rounds.

Of course, the player is to blame. If he didn't buy balls from bootleggers there would be no problem. But, according to the golfers, it takes strength of character to refuse offers of a dozen good balls for $1, even if some have been sandpapered to hide the owner's names.

There is no indication that organized gangs of men and boys steal balls. They really hunt and find them, carrying the finds from one course to another and selling them. It is intimated, however, that in some cases the golfer would find his lost ball if the outlaw hunters were not so industrious.

BOY!

this Gasoline is different —as different as a nor'east gale from a summer zephyr. There's stuff in this gasoline—action that takes hills like a hawk, response that gets you away like a rabbit at your slightest touch.

Every day, General has everything that real gasoline should have. It's always the same—always the best that we know how to make it. General never has an off day.

Stop at the Green and White Sign and say "General" to the Independent Dealer. Then you'll know what we mean by "different."

The dealer is a man worth while. He owns his own station. He has to give you the best of gasolines to keep you coming back for more. That's why he serves General. "Fill up your tank and let your engine decide."
