HERE IS ESSAY WHICH WON FIRST PRIZE IN CONTEST

As announced last week, Miss Orpha Arnold won first prize in the forest conservation essay contest, which was held recently by the chamber of commerce. The prize-winning essay follows:

PRESERVATION OF THE FORESTS OF AMERICA

A large percent of America's present and future wealth lies in her standing timber. Her forests are invaluable to her because of the lumber they produce. One can easily see that it would be impossible for a country to prosper without lumber. Any nation would be helpless in time of war because it takes a small forest to fit out one battle fleet. If for no other reason, we should preserve our forests because of the water sheds which they help to form. On the southern slopes of many mountains, you will find that the timber is thin and there are very few big trees. When the winter snows fall, they do not pack. As soon as there is a little spring sunshine, the snow melts and the water dashes in torrents down the mountain side, washing the land with it. And in the summer, these streams dry up. On the other hand, when the snow falls on the heavily timbered northern slopes the snow packs and does not melt rapidly, because of the dense shade and perfect wind break that the trees form. As this snow-ice slowly melts, it constantly feeds the numerous streams that furnish our country pure water.

Last, but not least, we should preserve our forests because they provide such beautiful resorts. Two thirds of the American people spend the most of their vacations in the mountains. Fishing and hunting, two of the best liked sports that the people of today indulge in, are made possible by our great forests.

Since the forests are of so great a value to our country, we must do everything we can to prevent them from being damaged in any way. The first important step toward the preservation of our timber is good roads, cross roads, and trails through the forests. If we do not have good roads, the forest rangers at the look-out stations will be of little or no benefit to us, for when they locate a fire ten miles distant and there is a poor road or maybe none at all, in this part of the country, it will be days before they can get fire fighters on the grounds. By this time, the fire has done thousands of dollars worth of damage. With good roads, the forest rangers can do a great deal to prevent the spreading of fire. The rangers, by the aid of expert apparatus they have, can very accurately locate a fire many miles away and telephone to the town nearest the fire and they send out fire fighters.

If good camping grounds are provided at convenient places, and everybody who visits our forests required to camp on these grounds, it would prevent many of the forest fires started by campers. Camp grounds that are properly cared for have proved a great benefit because the grounds are kept clean and free from trash that would help to start a fire. And the campers would not be in danger of drinking impure water if they use only that of the grounds.

We would not get the benefit of our timber if it were not for the logging camps and lumber mills that prepare it for our use, but this industry can do a great deal of harm to the forests. Often, a great amount of timber is wasted and many young trees are cut before they mature. We would not think of letting a hunter kill a deer and cut out a few of the best parts of the meat, leaving the rest to spoil, but we allow many big trees to be cut when only a few of the best cuts are used.

Everyone knows how barren and desolate a piece of logged off timber land looks and for this reason, we do not like to have a lumber mill come into the country. But barren wastes need not be the result of the lumbering industry. If this industry were supervised so that only mature trees could be cut, and all the waste brush burned, it would cost only a small amount to restore this land with young trees.

Another enemy of the forests is the porcupine. Their food consists entirely of the bark of young trees. Every man who is a true woodsman will not allow one of these pests to live.

The grazing of stock is beneficial to forests in that as they consume the grass, they help to prevent the spreading of fires. The trails made by the cattle make traveling easier for the fire fighters.

Despite all that the government can do to protect our forests, it will be impossible for them to succeed unless every person does his part in the preservation of the forests of America.

MISS ORPHA ARNOLD.

Pick out your Straw! Buy your New Suit, Automobile or Tires NOW!

Soft, summery days are here. The penetrating winds are gone. The damp, lowering skies have flown. The fruit trees are in gay blossom. The plummaged songsters are back on the hedges. The long era of furnace fires has come to a close. Light-heartedness, a new outlook on life, a new spirit, has come with the vanishment of the long, protracted stretch of cold and miserable weather.

Attune yourself to the new-day cheer. Cast aside the soot-laden fedora; buy a straw. Pack away the overcoat; buy a light suit. Breathe the youth of summer into your cravats—and your activities.

Take your automobile and vagabond on Nature's smooth pathways. Travel—get out where you can see Nature, feel her, vibrate to her beauties. If the old car is a bit drab, trade it in for a new one. If you have never known the thrills of stepping on the gas, know them now—buy an automobile.

If your tires are worn threadbare, discard them. Equip with four new tires. Abandon the fears of blowouts for the smiles of dependable motoring. Decoration Day provides three glorious holidays—be fit to enjoy them.

Summer is the queen of the seasons. She is here—ahead of her calendar day, to compensate for the cold and dreary Spring. So if you are in the doldrums—snap out of it. Don't delay. Don't postpone. Buy, enjoy and be happy?

Pick out your straw—and your new tires! Your Summer suit or your new automobile—Celebrate the coming of the Summer Season Now!

Don't let up on your work. That's what has made this the most prosperous Nation on earth. But give a timely thought to your vacation period too. Tennis things; golf clubs; fishing tackle—the very thought of them should set your blood tingling.
