SAVE THAT INSURANCE

Thirty billions of d flars may be secured for their mothers, wives or children by American soldiers, if they renew their war risk insurance before July 2nd. After that date the chance is gone.

Thirty billions is about three times the amount of all the pensions paid to the men who fought all our wars. It s 50 per cent more than the national debt. equal to hearly half the value of all our farm land and equivalent to half a year's national income.

Thinking in billions, however, will get the soldier nowhere. If he can be induced to think in terms of daughter's high school career and his wife's peace of mind, he will lose no time in renewing his war riisk insurance. Three-fourths of the veterans of the last war have let their government policies lapse. The issue of that insurance, the inspiration of a minor government official in a minor office of the District of Columbia, was a social gain of the first magnitude. If 90 per cent of it had been kept in force, the poverty ultimately averted, the families kept intact, the totally disabled men provided for, and the endowments coming to the rescue of old age would have constituted a national profit — intangible and im-measurable, but not the less real — which would have Now I'm sure of it. offset a great part of the cost of the war. WORK, NOT LUCK, COUNTS

There is an adage that "There is luck in leisure" as anybody. there is an adage that There is like in leistile at any rate, what he wants but there is no truth in that adage and there is as little at any rate, what he wants but there is no truth in that adage and there is as little he'll be pretty apt to get, either by taking it for himself or askmerit don't mean anything anymore, the lucky man will in anyway."

Of course there have been battles won by luck in which the better man lost, but they are proverbable exeptions which prove the rule and are so outnumbered by sidents the reverse as to be unworthy of notice. Luckn successes are accidents. Work-won successes are inents. Accdients always attract more attention than inients for the same reason that normal human bings, eh are incidents, pay money to see freaks of nature, ich are accidents. To depend on luck is to play blind loved him. Better throw a few man's baff among the laws of nature and of man.

These laws when studied carefully, seem to prove at in the long run the best man wins the best place, and stand merit does succeed. Evidences to the contrary merely the flips of chance.

Luck transmutes no ataract into electricity. Luck is never a ladder from the arth of mediocrity to the heaven of achievement.
