"LANTERN OF THE DEAD"

Luther Harrison, an editorial writer on the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, has written a tribute to the soldier dead in the poppy fields of France that is worth while cutting out and pasting in your scrap book. Read it thru and thru:

"In northern France not far from Notre Dame Lorette in the midst of the plains of Artois stands today Lanterne Des Morts, or in our English tongue 'the lantern of the dead.' On the highest hill of the shell-torn plain, at the peak of an imposing tower, shines out on every darkened night, the solemn light that keeps forever the vigil of the dead. The giant lantern was erected by the French republic as a monument to those who freely gave their all to save homeland from the Hun.

"Around that lantern's base, as far as human eye can see is a perfect ocean of white crosses marking pitifully the resting place of the forgotten dead. Literally hundreds of thousands of the sons of France are sleeping there waiting peacefully for the blast of the last reveille. And not France alone has filled the lime of that desolate plain with her bravest and her best, for death took toll of many nations to fill that far flung sepulchre. Scottish laddies are resting there side by side with those who broke beloved home-ties under the light of Australian stars. Lads from Mother England rest with the Celtic sons of Old Ireland, and many an American fireside is desolate that some grave might be filled under the watchful eye of the 'lantern of death.'

"These men were not murderers and the bugle note that called them forth to battle was not the bugle note of murderers. The lands they loved were peaceful lands. The flags they followed were stainless flags, and the cause they died to vindicate was among the holiest cause that ever marshalled armies and called them to the brink of hell. Neither they nor theirs coveted the blood of war. As they walked with star-eyed maidens thru shady lanes and along the streets of quiet cities planning the life of love and tender service the dice of death were cast in the palaces of Potsdam and the madmen of Berlin sounded the tocsin of unexampled war.

"They saw the long gray waves of death backed by a nation 'prepared to the last shoe buckle' dash against the walls of unprepared nations. They saw Serbia buried alive and Belgium driven to the washes of the sea. They saw army after army of the Anglo-Saxon annihilated because those armies came from a country unprepared but a country that scorned to treat with murderers. They saw the opening veins of imperial France, the lilled nation of poetry and fire, and they saw the 500,000 Frenchmen who died at Verdun. And they heard the triumphant foot-beats of a mighty army that came up out of the wastes of ocean to plant the stars of a western civilization in the firmament of the east. And they saw millions of mangled limbs, millions of blinded eyes, millions of piteous corpses, that lay lifeless in the bloody mire because the peace-loving nations of the earth were unprepared for the bursting storm.

"All is peaceful now along the plains of Artois. The dews of morning kiss the scarlet blankets woven by poppies above the bivouac of the dead. The falling sunlight caresses the crosses that mark the graves of a million sainted heroes. The night winds whisper tenderly along the rows of silent sleepers from many nations who meeting here at last under alien skies keep forever the mysterious rendezvous of death. And above them all sweeps the fadeless light of the 'Lanterne Des Morts.' Patient as the eye of destiny, vigilant as the light of freedom, it tells the centuries that so long as light and life endures the sons of freedom will live and die that freedom itself shall not perish forever from the earth.

"By no means are the rays of that solemn lantern confined to the plains of Artois. They reach beyond the boundaries of the nations of Europe. They reach beyond the desert of the ocean and the island of the sea. They reach beyond the pale lips of the southern hemisphere where the Anzac keeps alive the memory of freedom's battles under the light of the southern cross.

You can't tell these days whether a girl is good looking or not unless you catch her with her face just washed.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, — Creating a nation to order sounds like a good deal of an undertaking, but the Jews are getting away with it in Palestine, according to the Department of Commerce.

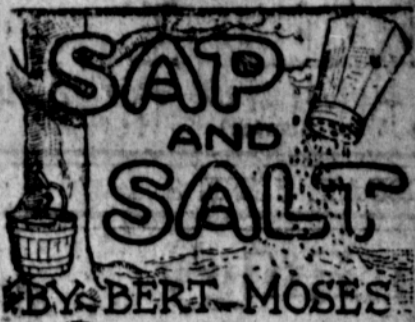

Of course all nations are created some time or other, some of them, like the United States, pretty quickly.

The reconstruction, by this scattered people, of their ancestral home must be an extraordinary thing to watch, judging from the Commerce Department's account.

Not, indeed, that the department makes any attempt at a picturesque handling of the subject.

It's simply a dry commercial report, but in order to give a proper idea of the country's business possibilities, the department's investigators do not find it necessary to make some reference to the settlers' accomplishments in the last few years.

If the Commerce Department is to be trusted—and it is pretty cold-blooded in its analyses—not many nations have made such progress in post-war reconstruction as the Jews, starting from scratch, in Palestine.

Slayer Of Spouse Sought In Canada

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 8.—Police here are uniting with the police of many cities in search of Louis J. Ring, real estate man of Minneapolis, charged with first degree murder in the hysterical death of his wife, Bertha.

Ring, who was indicted in Hennepin county, Minnesota, disappeared about the time his wife's body was found, April 23, in Lake Pepin, near Ellsworth, Wis. He was reported a few days ago in Winnipeg, Man., westbound.

Mrs. Landes Now Mayor Of Seattle

SEATTLE, June 8.—(UP)—Seattle has a new mayor today—and a petticoat government.

The new mayor is Mrs. Bertha A. Knight Landes, one of the most picturesque women of America.

She has surrounded herself with a group of new appointive officials which she hopes will be able to effect the "reasonably strict" law enforcement that she demands.

Wrestling Team Will Make Tour

COLLEGE, Corvallis, Ore., (UP)—A five men wrestling team, representing the Oregon Aggies, will tour the United States next year, after the regular intercollegiate season, according to plans now being made by Robin Reed, coach.

The tentative schedule calls for departure from here in May, the first stop being in California. Texas will be the next state visited, then Oklahoma and other southern states.

Camel is the smoker's sign of friendship

IN THE home, or at the club—in busy office or crowded street—whenever friend meets friend, you will hear that magic invitation—have a Camel!

And wherever Camels are lighted, men come together in more friendly understanding. No other cigarette ever had or made so many friends or brought so much added friendliness to the world as Camel, for Camel's quality is a universal language.

Camel is more than a cigarette. It is an experience in smoking enjoyment—the finest this old earth affords. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown, and these fine tobaccos are superbly blended, as in no other cigarette. The enjoyment of Camels goes on forever, for they never tire the taste no matter how liberally you smoke them. They simply never leave a cigarette after-taste. No other cigarette in the world is like them. Millions of experienced smokers who could well afford to pay more will buy and smoke only Camels.

Whenever and wherever you meet a friend, let that be a standing invitation to the sheerest enjoyment that ever came from a cigarette.
