HOPES OF SWIMMING CHANNEL HOPELESS

By Henry L. Farrell
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, June 18.—(UP)—No swimmer—male or female—will be able to swim the English Channel this year in the opinion of numerous French and English swimming experts and trainers. Abnormal weather conditions, following a terrible winter on the oceans and an extremely tardy spring, will prevail during the summer season and will make it extremely perilous for a man to attempt the battle with the channel tides and virtually impossible for a woman.

Before starting a recent trip across the channel, the writer asked a hard faced old veteran of the crew if he thought a woman ever would be able to conquer the cold water, the tides and the waves that are part of the channel's daily routine. "The boat, tied up at the dock was bobbing up and down like one of those trick floor devices at Coney Island and waves were breaking over the prow. With the exception of one or two celebrants who had reached a "don't care" condition on the train from London, the passengers were all violently ill and the trip hadn't started.

"Swim 'er?" the old salt answered. "Tis a hard job for a mah to ride 'er. Look at the way she's running now. I'd call the bobbles if a girl of mine tried to swim

He said that only the greatest of luck ever had enabled a man to swim across and that it needed more than luck to make it possible for a girl.

Even those who are to train Gertrude Ederle, Lillian Cannon, and other American misses who are to make the attempt this summer, are skeptical that the young Americans will be successful. They and others, interested in the success of any adventurous young woman feel that the year is against them. The channel, they say, has been crazy all winter, colder and more tricky than ever and they are of the opinion that the same conditions will prevail all through the summer.

Capt. Jensen, master of the S. S. Minnekahda, who was on the bridge of the Lapland when she was submerged during the war and who has been on the sea since he was able to handle a line said, that last winter was the worst he had ever seen and he expressed the opinion that abnormal conditions in all ocean waters would prevail all through the summer.

$175,000 HOTEL AT SEASIDE IS PLANNED

SEASIDE, Ore., June 17.—This Oregon beach resort city will soon have a log hotel which will cost approximately $175,000, according to a group of local capitalists. The hotel will be a rustic building and will be constructed from logs, to symbolize the lumber industry of the Pacific northwest according to George L. Hutchins, Portland promoter who has secured an option on a 40-acre site.

Cannon Beach—Excellent indications reported near here.
