SUSPICIOUS KLAMATH

If the people of Klamath Falls continue to listen to the fanatical tales of a few irresponsible tourists who claim to have received mis-information concerning the highway between Klamath Falls and the Pacific highway, they are very apt to attain a high fever throughout the summer. Glaring headlines in Klamath's morning newspaper Saturday spoke of the "malicious" reports emanating from Ashland, Medford and other cities along the Pacific highway. It spoke, too, of the "unfriendliness" of these communities concerning Klamath Falls.

The people of Klamath know, or at least, they should know, that the people of Ashland and Medford are on friendly terms and wish to continue on friendly terms with the people of Klamath Falls and Klamath county.

The people of Ashland, through their chamber of commerce or any other civic organization, cannot be made answerable for any misleading report which some individual may possibly give concerning Klamath Falls and the highway to Klamath Falls.

The Tidings, however, has checked up on one or two stories which have been broadcast in Klamath Falls and learns that a few of these irresponsible tourists are wholly to blame, and not the people of this section of the state.

One instance was given last week. A motorist went into the A.A.A. office at Dunsuir and inquired the road to Klamath Falls from the Pacific highway. The A.A.A. representative there telephoned to the Ashland office and was told that the road was in good condition; that the highway between Keno and Klamath Falls, a distance of 12 miles, had been recently oiled, and would necessitate cautious driving over the freshly oiled portion of the roadway.

This self-same motorist upon arriving at Klamath Falls is reported to have said he was informed by Ashland persons that the road was in a dangerous condition and he should not attempt it. Why this particular motorist should have been so careless with the truth we are unable to say, but it is a report such as this which causes temperamental Klamath to muss its hair and kick up a fuss over nothing at all.

The people of Klamath, apparently, are a suspicious lot. We can recall that when they established their tourist bureau at the junction of the two highways, they kept their plans a dark secret for many days for fear, as they aptly stated, that Ashland would "get wise" and in some way balk their plans. They thought—mistakenly, of course—that they were "putting something over" on Ashland, and now when a few hair-brained tourists spread these false reports of information they never received, Klamath, with a guilty conscience, perhaps, is quick to shout that Ashland is seeking reprisal.

The people of Ashland, so far as we have been able to judge them, have nothing but the kindest feeling toward Klamath Falls and her people. The people of Ashland are not worried or jealous or concerned one way or another with the Klamath information booth which is being started at the junction of the highways.

If the Klamath county chamber of commerce would devote as much time and energy to tracing to their source some of these irresponsible stories as it does in listening to them, we confidently predict there would be a better feeling between the two communities and much of the bitterness which is now confined exclusively to Klamath, would soon disappear.

VOTING IS OUTLAWED

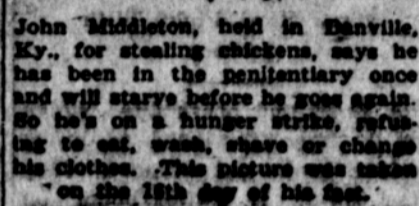

A Western state just published a book of its election laws and regulations. It takes 295 pages of fine print, which few ever read.

There are so many laws and regulations governing registration and voting, that half the citizens do not know whether they are entitled to go to the polls or not, or whether they can vote after they get there. Result, fewer and fewer people take part in elections.

In many precincts almost no one votes but the election officers, the judges and clerks; and the cost of elections has run up as high as a dollar per ballot cast and counted. Some of the Eastern states have even more voluminous laws and regulations.

Manhood and womanhood suffrage has become a thing of the past, and legislatures are trying to hold fewer elections, and hold all general and local elections on the same day. The result of this packing and regulations tends to has a special significance this year—it is exactly one hundred fifty years since the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

A great International Exposition is now being held in Philadelphia to fittingly celebrate this important anniversary, and in order to assist in bringing a proper recognition of the day to Ashland, we have procured fac-simile copies of the Declaration of Independence which we propose to distribute to 100 school children of this vicinity who will write a composition of not less than 150 or more than 200 words on the subject "CITIZENSHIP."

These fac-simile copies are 16x20 inches, on the finest parchment paper, exact reproductions of the original, and are desirable mementos of that most important document.

We will also give a first prize of $3.00 and a second of $2.00 for the two best compositions.

The contest is open to all children between ten and fifteen years of age.

Compositions must be left at the bank not later than 3 o'clock P. M., July 2nd.

Rules governing the contest may be obtained at the bank.

The names of the winners will be announced in the bank windows on July 5th.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES F. STEWART
NEA Service Writers

Washington — Transforming his investigation of senatorial primary election expenses into an Anti-Saloon League "probe" was one of the most remarkable achievements of Senator James A. Reed's career.

When the inquiry started nobody had the slightest idea that the wet-and-dry issue would figure in it. Reed himself had no such thought. It was impossible for him to foresee that the opportunity to drag it in would present itself.

Reed was considerably handicapped during the investigation of prohibition enforcement, conducted by the judiciary sub-committee engaged in consideration of wet-and-dry bills.

He was not that committee's chairman, as he is of this one. Furthermore, he was in a wet minority of one against four dries. Try as he would, he never succeeded in getting the individual he most particularly wanted, Wayne B. Wheeler, on the witness stand.

Now, besides being his own chairman, he has at least one sympathizer on his committee with him, Senator La Follette, no quite so vehement a wet as himself, but still a wet. Two other members, Senators McNary and Goff, certainly are dries, but the fifth, Senator King, at least will not stand in the way of anything Reed tries to do.

Wheeler, while an important witness, with his revelation of the names of members of Congress who have accepted pay from the Anti-Saloon League for making dry speeches, undoubtedly is only incidental to the Reed Program.

Having striped, it is a foregone conclusion that he will continue to do all the damage he can. The committee will not adjourn with Congress but will hold sessions during recess, so that the Missouri senator will have all the time he wants.

TRAFFIC REGULATIONS TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

STOCKHOLM, (UP) — The rules of traffic are hereafter to be taught in the Swedish public schools as a regular part of the curriculum, it has been announced here by the Department of Education.

This method has been adopted as part of a campaign to reduce automobile accidents and the Swedish authorities have decided that not only drivers of cars but the school children themselves must be warned and trained to avoid collisions.

TOM SIMS SAYS

The wet and dry issue is increasing in importance. Those on the wet side say it's snafu or swim.

Here's ambition for you. In Long Island four volunteer firemen were jailed for starting 10 fires.

The fish trust is accused of making 400 per cent profits. Those back of the combine must be eels.

Most of these people playing bridge are alleged bridge players.

Washington's all upset over the Teana-Arica snarl. But the average citizen thinks it's some sort of salve.

The saxophone was invented in 1840 by Adolphe Sax. He escaped.

OUT OUR WAY By Williams

The Best of everything

"It's perfectly beautiful!" exclaimed the visitor, looking raptly out to sea. "But, oh, my dear, what do you do for provisions, stores, shopping? You are miles away!"

"We have the best of everything!" said her hostess with positiveness. "During the summer a great many yachts, and ships of the Atlantic fleet, find anchorage near the fishing village over there. So the little general store keeps a complete stock of all the best brands—absolutely everything."

The Best Brands! It was not necessary to specify products. Any woman of intelligence and good taste who reads the advertisements knows that there is a best brand for every commodity used in the household. And that brand is sufficient guarantee of excellence.
