She'll Dance for Wounded Vets

When the Disabled American Veterans of the World War hold their sixth annual convention at Atlanta, Ga., late this month, Miss Margaret Moore will dance for them. She is known as "the South's perfect girl."

SMALL TOWN DOCTOR PRAISES SALVATION ARMY ACTIVITIES

"Is this the Salvation Army?" The town's leading physician was calling up the Captain of the Salvation Army by phone.

A working man's family of mother, father and five children were ill. Just up from the measles, they were again quarantined with scarlet fever. The dread sign kept the neighbors and the relief societies away. Perhaps the Army would do something?

Gladly the Captain assured the "hallooed" until the tired, word doctor they would—and at once.

Standing outside the fence he ried mother came to the window. By shouting they made each other understand and just as the Salvationist finished a list of needs a small girl joined the mother at the window, holding up on tiny, unshod feet to show she needed shoes. With eager little nose pressed against the window pane she watched the Captain whistling down the street.

Straight to the Army's Industrial Home he went, and there procured all that was necessary from the clothing of all kinds and sizes given to this branch of the Army's work by local towns people.

With bundles in his arms he went back—then waited outside for further news from the inside of the little house. Soon a small girl was back at the window, waving first her new red petticoat, then her new shoes, and finally smiling and throwing kisses to the happy Captain as she danced about in her new dress.

The mother too, came to the window but could not speak for the tears that were running down her cheeks. The glow around that Captain's heart increased. How good God was to let him find such pleasant ways to serve. Then and there he tossed his earnings and not much at that—but all he had across the fence to the astonished mother to buy fuel. Now the best part of this story is that it is true and the doctor tells about it when he hears that the Salvation Army is to have a campaign for funds.

"They," he says, "are the people who will go anywhere, any time, to help anybody and in any way they can. I know because I tested them."

Anyhow, They Did

Well, whether the ladies have the same rights to nocturnal sports as the visiting Bakery Watchmen, of the World, or whether any one shall say them nay or not, they have gone and done it themselves. God bless 'em.

So, when the American Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs meets in annual session at Des Moines, Ia., July 13, there will be something heavy said about it. And here's the reason:

Picture night folding her starchy curtain over the community of Wiltona, Minn. Magnus Johnson the Great has laid aside the burdens of the empire and folded the mantle of sleep about him. Away off on the prairie a dog howls Or is it a wolf?

A Tapping at the Door

Suddenly there is a tapping at Magnus' cabin door. The valet, sergeant-at-arms and factotum twinkles his tootles across the bare floors and asks who it be.

"Open, in the name of the Business and Professional Women's Club of St. Paul, Minnesota!" is the militant reply.

"His majesty, the gubernatorial aspirant, is deep in slumber," replies the outpost.

The ladies only laugh.

"Get him up, kind sir," say they in chorus.

Now Magnus Johnson has not won his way to the threshold of Minnesota's governorship by napping whenever there was a handful of loose ballots to be garnered. And, he is one to know well when he is beaten. So Magnus arose.

The General Host

"Ah, ha!" said he, "I see you are wide-awake ladies."

"That was a very good speech for a man loaded with sleep didn't you think, girls?"

"A business man must always meet business women," Magnus scratched his uncombed head. There seemed nothing more to be said about it.

"Good night," he said in his most charming manner, and that's all there is to it!

Now, where's the harm in that?

None, of course, but—did you see that slinking figure with a pad and pencil steal from behind a tree just after the ladies had tripped away?

Stirs Up Comment

Next day Winona papers were full of it. And Miss Ella Mary Cloyes, president of the Minneapolis Business Women's Club, heard all about it. And she sent a letter to the president of the state federation.

Mrs. Emma H. Perkins is president of the state board. Should it occur to her to call a meeting of the federation, there could be lots of trouble. But Mrs. Perkins is holding her peace.

Minneapolis business women are demanding that some form of discipline be meted out. St. Paul business women are saying "Women has just as much right to cut up at conventions as men," "fun," say the ladies of St. Paul. And who shall say them nay?

WHO'LL SAY NAY TO LADY CUTUPES?

MINNEAPOLIS, July 2.—If the visiting Shriners, Rotarians or firemen have the right to parade in their robes of sleep at convention time, have not the dear, delightful ladies the same right?

And, if the convening Elk, Moose, Kiwanians or Woodmen of the World choose to cut up, after convention business is ended, by roaming the streets seeking what they may play pranks upon, shall any man among men arise and say the ladies shall not go and do like-wise?

Furthermore, if any lady of group, of ladies chooses to demand that a candidate for the governorship of a great state abandon his cot at 2 a. m. that they may probe his views on predatory privileges, the feminine touch in the workaday world or the big price gauge on Swiss chard, shall any human

Miss Rosalee Boone of Pine Bluff, Ark. was elected national president of Delta Beta Sigma, high school sorority, at that organization's convention in her home city. She at once announced a campaign against the excessive use of cosmetics by high school girls.

The man who thought a buggy was good enough

In the old days, a solid, conservative citizen might sniff and tell you he didn't read advertising.

He didn't think so much of the horseless carriage, either. The telephone was newfangled, and an insult to the United States mails.

As for radio, aeroplanes, wireless photography — if they had been born then, he probably would have thought them a bit immoral.

But he's changed. He's been educated. His point of view has been made broader and more modern. He has been civilized — by the automobile, the telephone, radio, advertising.

Every single one has opened up new paths for him, taught him new things. Advertising, especially. Advertising tells him the newest things to wear, the best things to eat. Advertising tells his wife how to make a home up to date and attractive. Advertising tells him the prices to pay for things he buys, saves him from the old-fashioned ways of doing business — helps him live well, keeps him modern.

Advertising can help you. The advertisements in this newspaper are here to tell you many things that make life more comfortable, more interesting, happier. Read them faithfully. They'll keep you abreast of the times. They'll prevent you from becoming the type of old foggy who — sniff! — doesn't read advertising.
