THE ASHLAND NORMAL

The magnificent new home of the Southern Oregon Normal school at Ashland was dedicated Saturday afternoon, June 26, with ceremonies properly befitting the occasion. The event marks a new and improved era in the educational circles of Southern Oregon and restores to Ashland and this section of the state an institution long required.

The completion of the imposing structure which is to house the school is an auspicious occasion for our sister city. Ashland is primarily a beautiful city of schools, churches, homes and culture. No city in Oregon offers better home life and environment for an institution of higher learning. The splendid environment which abounds in that city has been in the making for the past half century, and in no city or town in Oregon has it reached a higher plane.

The restoration of the normal school and the completion of the beautiful structure that is to house the school constitute a real asset to Ashland and Southern Oregon as a whole. Ashland is manifesting justifiable pride in the school and all of Southern Oregon joins in sharing her pride.

Under the guidance of Mr. Churchill as president, and with its splendid location, the Southern Oregon Normal is becoming a great factor in the educational circles of Oregon. That it will wield a tremendous influence for good upon members of the present generation, and upon those of generations to come is the firm conviction of all. — Jackson County News.

BALANCED EDUCATION

Eighty-two boys in the graduating class of the Jefferson High School in Portland earned $64,383.50 during their high school course, the average for the class of 93 being $682.50. One boy, Neil Bodey, earned $2,280. The girls earned an average of $71.05, with 48 girls collecting $3,454.60; and Alma Lorenz earned $500.

The nature of the jobs indicates that the present generation is not drifting too far into "white-collar" preference. Almost every industry, however hard or hand-spiling, was represented.

Education should make a man better qualified for citizenship, for enjoyment, for trust, because of his better balance and his wider vision; it should not take from him the basic principles of faithfulness to his job, whatever it is.

LET'S MAKE OUR ROADS WIDER

More than 40,000 miles of highways will be paved this year, after which the mileage of hard-surfaced roads in the United States will be in excess of 500,000. This is twice the improved road mileage of ten years ago, says the New York Commercial.

Standards of living cannot be raised nor industrial progress made in the mud. But we are rapidly approaching the time when the linear measurement of our roads will not be as important as width and load-carrying capacity. If every state in the Union was honeycombed with paved highways, it would be a number of years before we would acutely feel the need for increased road width. But all states are not, nor is there any immediate prospect of their reaching that point. This results in forcing the constantly increasing motor traffic on to the existing stretches of pavement, with congestion, delay, accidents and rapid highway depreciation as a result.

CASUALTY COMPANIES ENCLOSE PREVENTION

Insurance companies writing workmen's compensation insurance have been experiencing heavy losses from this type of business. They cannot cease writing such insurance, and they are starting an investigation to determine how to write such policies and at least break even. Conditions and laws change so rapidly in this country, that it is said rates are out of date almost before they become effective.

Casualty companies are extremely active in accident prevention work, and beneficial results should eventually be recorded, not only for the workmen but for the companies through reduced loss ratios.

Why go to the mat about your pipe tobacco?

MAYBE you and your pipe have never peacefully settled the question of what tobacco you're going to smoke... but you'll never get anywhere wrestlin' and wranglin' about it!

The place to settle the argument is right in the bowl of your pipe. Let the tobaccos fight it out! Match any tobacco you choose against Granger Rough Cut. That'll settle it... once and for all!

From your pipe's standpoint there's no argument to it. Granger is PIPE TOBACCO! All ripe old Burley... the choicest pipe tobacco grown. And the old Wellman Secret gives it a rich, fragrant mellowness... such mellowness as you never tasted in any pipe tobacco!

Cool... spicy... mild... and mellow! A couple of pipe loads settle your tobacco problem forever! You'll settle down to Granger... for the rest of your life!
