WHITEHALL BOATS ARE TO BE DAILED

SAN FRANCISCO, (AP)—Years ago the great bay of San Francisco was dotted, every day of the week, with the white sails of sturdy little craft peculiar to this great land-locked harbor, the Whitehall boats.

A Whitehall boat was not the pleasure craft a white sail-indicates these days. It was built for work, to plough through the tumbling swells beyond the Golden Gate, designed, over its scant 19 feet, to meet a bad sea as well as the smooth.

Mostly, the Whitehall boat was used by commercial agents to race to visiting sailing ships, take orders and run back to San Francisco to fill them.

The competition thus arising sometimes lent a racing aspect to their going and return. Their gearmen, then, would become enthused with a keen spirit of sport. Thus was the staid and business-like Whitehall boat sometimes employed as a racer for racing's sake alone.

Long since sent to the marine graveyard by the advent of the motorboat, the Whitehalls have almost completely disappeared. Only four are known to remain.

Owned by the United States lighthouse service, these four, distinguished from all modern sailing craft by their resemblance to a glorified rowboat, with a single sail and centerboard, have lain unused for years.

Advertised for sale a few days ago, they were bought by Dave Crowley, whose father was "Hooker-on" Crowley, one of the commission men who sailed the Whitehall boats in years past.

Sentiment was behind the purchase. For all practical purposes, the Whitehall boats are valueless. But they strike fond memories from the hearts of old sailing men, and Crowley expects to see scores of them lining the wharf when he starts the four survivors one of the days soon, in a race out to the "Gate" and back.

Another Reserve For Game Sought

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., July 7.—(UP)—A movement to have the Olympic national forest declared a game preserve by the national government has been begun by a group interested in conservation of wild life. Better protection of elk and other wild animals from illegal hunters is the purpose.

For several years elk herds have experienced a pleasing increase but sportsmen claim the animals need even better protection than is now afforded them.

COCKTAILS ARE SERVED BY ENGLISH BARBERS

LONDON, (UP)—"Will you have a cocktail, sir, while you are waiting for your shave?"

This is the latest (conceivable) greeting in London's fashionable barber shops. One of the most exclusive of the Bond street barberships has just installed a bar on the floor above the barbershop.

Smoking, reading and card rooms have also been established in connection with the bar to while away the annul of protracted waiting.

Announcement of the opening of the bar has inspired facetious Americans to suggest that perhaps the drink is designed to alleviate the tortures of an English shave.

RELEASE FROM JAIL CAUSES MAN'S DEATH

MEXICO CITY, (AP)—When Ruzaque Garcia, awaiting trial in a Tacuba jail on a statutory charge, was informed by his son that bail had been arranged pending the calling of his case, he fell backwards as though he had fainted.

His joy at approaching release had killed him.

PEKING TRAFFIC RULES

PEKING (AP)—Peking motorists must henceforth refrain from driving their cars "at full speed" through the streets, says a police proclamation.

Two reasons are given: First, because of dry weather the streets are full of dust which is detrimental to health when inhaled. Second—apparently an after thought on the part of the police—accidents should be avoided.

CITY COUNCIL BATTLES WITH CLYDE MALONE

The mayor was informed by one council member—name unknown or deleted—that he was playing for votes by taking a stand in favor of the park dances.

He was accused of being against dancing privately and for it publicly as a matter of policy.

The mayor's retort is reported to have been straight to the point and to have covered considerable territory. He told the council "In my own mind, I know what I think should be done," he is reported to have told the council.

"And I am going to insist that I either be allowed to proceed as I have started or else I am going to step down and out."

The council then compromised by giving the city manager what he demanded, and agreed to authorize the expenditure of $500 for this water survey. It also was reported they had agreed to approve the lumber, the electric fan and the shock absorbers.

After the scrap with Malone had been put into the discard, it is reported that council members and Mayor Johnson took a few jabs and appercuts at each other with ruffled feelings the only casualties. The mayor chided the council because it had approved parallel parking after seven weeks of investigations and then had reverted to head-in parking on two minutes notice after business men had urged them to do so. He also reminded them of their reputed changeable attitude on the public dance question.
