Lucky Telephone Number Comes Higher in Japan

In Japan, where telephone subscribers must pay their instrument, paying anywhere from $500 to 7,000 yps, depending on the number, the number "3" is considered the luckiest. It, therefore, usually brings the highest price. Another lucky number to the Japanese is "88".
On the other hand, certain numbers are regarded as unlucky, among them "4" and "43" and it is significant that these numbers are usually assigned to police stations.

TO BUILD 1500 MILES OF TOLL CABLE IN 1926

Bell System Pushes Program for Better and More Dependable Long Lines Service

The construction of toll cable lines between important points in the Bell System is a feature of modern telephone plant development which makes for better service. The open wire pole line with its many cross-arms frequently suffers damage from sleet and wind storms. It has not been an uncommon thing to have miles of pole lines laid low by storm violence or the weight of accumulated ice on the wires, and when this occurs it sometimes costs the telephone companies way up in the millions to reconstruct the lines and to restore the service.

Toll cable line construction minimizes the danger from storms and insures against interruption of the service by the unruly elements. More than 1000 miles of toll cable were placed in service in the Bell System during 1923. This included the completion of the New York-Chicago cable route and of about half of the Chicago-St. Louis cable route.

This year it is expected that more than 1500 miles of toll cable will be placed in service. The program for 1926 includes extensions to the cable system and the addition of relief cables on existing routes.

The expansion of the toll cable system has been made possible by the application of the repeater or current amplifier to the loaded long distance circuits. The repeater permits the use of cables in place of open-wire construction and allows the use of smaller gauge wire.

At the beginning of 1925 there were about 5500 repeaters in service in the Bell System; 2500 repeaters were added in 1925 and it is expected that about 6000 repeaters will be installed this year.

CASHIER'S QUICKNESS AND TELEPHONE FOIL BANDITS

Presence of mind on the part of Russell Statts, cashier of the Chingwater (Wyo.) State Bank, together with an opportune telephone call from his wife, recently saved the bank from being robbed. Just as two burglars were thrusting revolvers in front of Statts, the telephone bell rang. In raising his hands, Statts managed to knock off the receiver from the telephone and, at the same time, cried, "Rob me, but don't shoot." The hold-up men seeing the receiver off the hook, took no chances, but made their escape while, in the meantime, the cashier's wife notified the police who arrested the two young men just as they were about to board a freight train.

MANY NEW SETTLERS COMING TO OREGON

Seventy-three new arrivals from the east and middle west selected farm homes in Oregon during the month of June, a continuation of the trend of the various sections of the state, according to the records of the Land Settlement Department of the State and Portland Chambers of Commerce.

That Oregon gained economically by this influx of farmers and their families is evidenced by the fact that they made capital investments of over $243,300.

In addition the department has been visited by sixty-nine families who have been in correspondence and have arrived to make a selection of a farm in Oregon.

During the month of June the Land Settlement Department was in communication with 81 people who announced that they would come to this state to locate. These people have furnished confidential information showing that they have capital to invest amounting to more than $190,000.

Personal letters answers specifically individual questions are sent to all inquirers by W. G. Ida, manager of the State Chamber, and during June 2,356 of these letters were mailed from the office. Accompanying letters to prospective homeseekers were 4,379 places of illustrated literature containing facts relative to all sections of Oregon. In this way placing of settlers on arrival is expedited, as they usually are able to determine beforehand the portion of the state which appeals to them most and they are immediately ready to confer with the local realtors and land settlement committeemen concerning the choice of a farm in that locality.

You are Looking at History

The hawker of yesterday who cried his wares in the public places is now but vaguely remembered—swallowed up in yesterday's seven thousand years.

Today the news of goods for sale becomes an indelible record of human achievement.

You may take, for instance, the history of transportation in America and read that extraordinary tale of progress in an unbroken series of advertisements in the files of newspapers — advertisements that inform us of each progressive step from the sailings of sloops out of Boston for Philadelphia in the days of Franklin, to the flight of the Air Mail from Mitchell Field to San Francisco in our own day.

You may read the startling story of the revolution in household economy and the emancipation of the American wife and home-builder in the advertisements of the last twenty-five years.

But in today's papers you find an even more amazing record—the advertisements of radio outfits, automobile equipment, electrical appliances, foodstuffs, clothing, medicines — things which have raised our civilization to a plane higher than the world has ever known. Do you quite realize that in these advertisements you are examining a contemporary contribution to the recorded history of civilization?
