CAN WE STAND PROSPERITY? Money in the average man's pocket burns its way out. Prosperity too often brings discontent. As with the individual, so it is with states and nations. People will struggle against adversity, and be drawn closer together by hardships. But when the necessity for self-preservation is removed, dissatisfaction, envy, jealousy and agitation creep in. That is the greatest danger our country faces today. We have been unusually prosperous. We have had more money than the necessities of life required. The "cure-all doctor" with his caldron of steaming political theories offers us a remedy for our real or imaginary problems. Like the magician who can produce a bowl of gold fish out of a silk hat, he offers us laws to help this class or that class, at the expense of another class. But when the curtain goes down on his act, he has our tax money, and we have had the pleasure of seeing him do his political tricks. Our country is ripe for the "cure all doctors." They can show us what is wrong with our present prosperity, and how by adopting their courses of treatment we can put two dollars in our pocket where we now have one, and better yet, make "the other fellow" pay the bill. We should be thankful for the prosperity which is now ours. The dog with the bone that saw his shadow in the water tried to grab the bone of the other dog, and lost the one he had. We not only have a bone but a good juicy steak in our teeth today. Our banks are full of money, our workmen are the highest paid on earth, most of our farm crops are bringing good prices, transportation is above normal, building is at record figures, power development has broken all records, our homes are filled with electric lights, telephones, radios, automobiles and every modern convenience under the sun. As a nation, can we stand prosperity, or will we allow ourselves to be duped by the "cure-alls" who would offer visionary theories in trade for proven advantages which we now enjoy? GOOD HEALTH PAYS DIVIDENDS In the last fifteen years one insurance company has spent $18,709,000 on health work for its industrial policy holders. During this period the death rate has declined more than 30 per cent. This reduction in mortality has meant an actual saving of $35,000,000 which, under the former death rate, would have been paid out in death settlements. An eighteen million investment and a thirty-five million saving! Insurance companies have found that health conservation brings a direct monetary return. This holds true for other business enterprises. There is something in this life saving business which reacts directly to the benefit of the manufacturer, the storekeeper, the public service corporation, the exporter, the farmer, the realtor. Disabling sickness resulting in inability to work has been found by actual surveys to amount to about seven days each year to industrial policy holders. Furthermore, it was discovered that about 2 per cent of the population on the average is sick at all times. The cost of this item alone in reduced production is estimated at about a billion dollars annually in the United States. WHY DESTROY BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY? America consumed, in 1925, 5,510,000 tons of sugar, or 107 1/2 pounds per capita. Sugar is about the only food commodity of importance selling for less than it did before the war. Considering the present purchasing value of $1.00, compared with 1913, sugar is now selling at what would have then been the equivalent of 3 3/4 cents a pound. Even with this cheap sugar, there is agitation to lower the sugar duty to a point which would wipe out the American sugar beet farmer and factory which safeguard us from foreign sugar dominations.

Ashland Now Is Tied For First Place

(Continued From Page One) made it almost impossible for the fly chasers to judge high balls and the fact that several of the high ones were lost in the sun accounted for several of the Pelican runs. Watts is Star The handful of fans who unjustly raved Captain Red Watts in the Mt. Shasta game last Monday should have watched his brilliant work at short stop yesterday. The fiery little field captain was a tower of strength, making several sensational stops of hard hit balls and otherwise holding his position like a leaguer. Every time a ball was hit in his direction the Klamath fans would start moaning. They knew it was a certain out.

In fact, the whole team played fast, clean baseball, the only errors chalked up against them being due to bare plays or the bothersome sun which made outfielding a miserable job. Phil O'Brien came in from his usual outfield position and worked behind the plate while Mohler was hurling and kept the team steadied at all turns in the lead. The old reliable Bill Force was back of the bat while Davis occupied the pitcher's mound. Crowd Disappointing Klamath had the poorest crowd of the present league season, the gate being smaller than it has been in Ashland for more than a month. Now that the Pelicans have dropped three straight games, the fans have deserted them, and they will have to get back into the winning column if Klamath is to maintain its boast of being the best baseball town in the league.

SUZANNE LENGLEN MAY PLAY HELEN WILLS ANOTHER GAME

BY HENRY FARRELL (U. P. Staff Correspondent) Another meeting between Miss Suzanne Lenglen and Miss Helen Wills for the world's tennis championship, if it could be staged in the United States probably would be the most interesting athletic contest that ever has been held. It is quite likely that it would cause as much discussion as a heavyweight championship fight and draw as many spectators if a stadium large enough was available. The recent disappointment that followed the forced default of Miss Wills in the French national championships increased instead of lessened the interest in the match between the two girls. The interest is by no means confined to France and the United States as was shown during the recent French hard court championships. The star correspondent of one of the largest news agencies in Europe was recalled from Geneva with instructions to turn over his assignment to a relief man and hurry to Paris for the Lenglen-Wills match. There has been much discussion in France and the United States about the attitude of Miss Lenglen toward another invasion of the United States. She was quoted during the Paris championships as saying that she would not go to the United States this summer and that she would never play there again. The statement was denied later by her and one of her party. Following her victory over Miss Mary Browne in the French championships in which critics who have followed her game for years said she showed the greatest form of her career, she was asked by the writer if she would be willing to return to the United States if invited. It was pointed out that her first experience in Forest Hills must have been distressing but that there were enough sportsmen in New York, with an appreciation of artistry to assure her of a pleasant visit. "I never have said that I would not play again in the United States," Miss Lenglen said. "I read many things in the papers that quote me on subjects that I never have been asked about. "I never have complained about any ill treatment I received in the United States and I meant nothing when I remarked that I sympathized with Miss Wills' misfortune in a foreign country because I once had been ill in a strange land. "Right now I cannot say that I will not play in the United States this summer or in any years to come. I may and I may not. I have not been asked to make a decision. "About those offers to turn professional I know nothing and I do not believe it necessary to answer a proposition that never has been presented to me. I never met those gentlemen who manage Red Grange and never heard of them until I saw the notices in the paper. I even had to ask some American friends who your Red Grange was. "While she laughed off the suggestion, there were good reasons to believe that she was not overly fond of American newspapermen but she may have changed her opinion after the Browne match. The Americans were the first to congratulate her on her fine game and she replied sincerely: "That is very sweet of you American boys." Advertise In The Tidings
