WHY NOT TRY IT?

Although automobile traffic in Ashland has increased just as fast as it has in other cities of the state, yet, happily, this city thus far has been singularly free from crashes which have resulted in serious injury or death.

Yet, it is the belief of The Tidings that another safety measure might well be adopted by the city officials as a means of safeguarding the lives of the children. We refer now to the intersections on both East and North Main streets where school children must cross the main artery of travel to reach the public schools.

We fully believe that thoughtful consideration will result in the city council making these cross streets near the public school buildings "stop" streets, and thus enable the small youngsters to cross Main street in security and safety and thus relieve mothers of constant worry at morning, noon and evening.

With the opening of the new Lincoln school on Beach street several hundred children who live below the Boulevard will be compelled to cross East Main street several times a day. We do not believe it is asking too much of the motorists to direct them to come to a full stop when they reach this street. It will halt them but momentarily but at the same time it would guarantee the safe crossing of the little tots on their way to and from school.

The same is true at the new junior high school closer to the business section and to the old junior high school on North Main street. Automobile traffic will increase here month by month and it is well now to plan for the future.

The lives of these little children are far too valuable to permit them to be snuffed out by a possible careless motorist, and The Tidings now lifts its voice on behalf of the youngsters, hoping that the city officials will find their way clear to designate these several streets as "stop" streets and thus provide added insurance on the lives of innocent childhood.

HELPPFUL COOPERATION

City water officials inform us that there have been but few instances this summer in which Ashland residents have failed to obey the rules regulating water for irrigation purposes which were made necessary because of the shortage of water during the past two months.

As a result of this willingness to obey the spirit as well as the letter of the law, there is every indication that sufficient water will be available next month to take care of all home gardens until the start of the fall rains. It is quite possible that other regulations as to hours may be required, but because of the cooperation of the people, it is practically certain that all irrigation water will not be shut off at any time during the remainder of the summer.

What few water violations have been reported have been due mainly to thoughtlessness rather than to any effort to evade the water rulings. This is the sort of cooperation that is making and will continue to make Ashland a most desirable place in which to live.

HIS NAME IS SMITH

Mr. Jeremiah Smith of Boston is entitled to a niche in the Hall of Fame. Notice that we used the prefix "Mr." This was done advisedly.

The Literary Digest tells us that Jeremiah Smith, American economist and gentleman, was picked by the League of Nations to put Hungary on its feet financially. When he had completed his task he flatly refused his salary of $100,000.

In declining the same he said: "Give it to charity. Then reenter it on your books as a gift from the American people to the people of Hungary." Then he was impertuned to accept a decoration "If you do that," he said, "I shall never forgive you. Your friendship and gratitude are more precious to me than any decoration."

When Mr. Smith got well into his job of rehabilitating Hungary he found an army of nobility drawing pay from the public crib and his invariable question to them was, "What do you do?" Of course the titled gentlemen could not give a very clear explanation of their duties, whereupon Smith would jot down a note or two and say: "Beginning next Monday you do something else."

Mr. Smith, we salute you as a great American citizen.

The New Hope

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — The governmental attitude in Washington is very pessimistic as to the war debt outlook.

Nobody can say how the French situation can straighten itself out.

State department officials have been looking for a dictatorship in France for some time. They look for it still.

But how will it help? Even under a dictator, their war indebtedness will still hang over the French.

If a dictator undertakes to settle it, the conviction is growing that he, too, will be overthrown.

If he repudiates it, French credit will be ruined. French money will be worth nothing at all, and in that event also he doubtless will be overthrown.

But in favor of whom?

It looks as if present complications were due to remain complicated, and to get worse. There appears to be no hope, even on the horizon.

Nobody suggests an attempt at war debt collection by force, but neither does anybody in official circles suggest cancellation. The French debt simply is there, and there seems to be no way of getting rid of it.

Franco-American relations are bad now—not officially but actually—and every indication is that they will stay bad indefinitely. They will continue to be bad if the Paris government agrees to a debt settlement and their badness will be aggravated if a settlement is refused.

That they will be bad in the former case is proved by Anglo-American relations, the English being actually engaged in paying up, but to the accompaniment of a chorus of references to the United States as "Uncle Shylock", by leading British newspapers and public men.

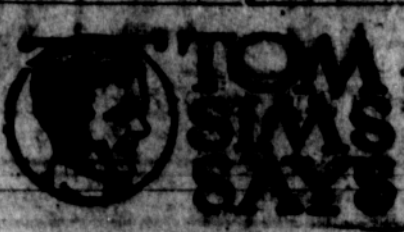

On the other hand, if France repudiates her obligations she undoubtedly will hate America even more cordially than she does now, and Americans will not have a particularly kindly feeling for the French.

Public men in Washington are careful not to say anything very strong for publication but there is no question that resentment among them is increasing, with the mobbing of American in Paris and denunciations of the United States in the English parliament as "a mere mercenary."

No apprehension of an immediate explosion is expressed. What is regarded as almost inevitable is a long period of hard feeling between this country and the old world—unpleasant and always liable to develop into something dangerous.
