A JAPANESE GIRL'S CREED

Fumie Yanagisawa, 13-year-old Japanese school girl at Berkeley, Calif., has been awarded the California state prize in the American Legion national contest, and the right to compete in the finals for the first prize of $1500 for writing a creed on the American flag. The little Jap girl who was born in this country, after a month's study as to what a "creed" was, wrote the following:

"I pledge allegiance to you, Flag of my United States, in word and deed. I believe that you will help me to be a loyal citizen in peace and war. I believe that you will lead the world not only in strength but in righteousness. I believe that your stars are the shining symbol of the eternal brotherhood of man in this world. Old Glory, as I stand and salute your heroic colors of red, white and blue, I promise to follow your ideals of 'liberty, justice and peace,' not only for America, but for the world."

ENCOURAGING THE TIMBER INDUSTRY

Recognition of the need for equitable tax systems on timberlands, was one of encouraging and outstanding facts in action of state legislatures during 1935. Constructive forestry work was accomplished in practically all of 13 state legislatures which met this year.

Kentucky owners of 1,000-acre tracts or more which are suitable for growing trees, may have such lands properly classified, so that an annual tax will be paid on the bare land, and the trees pay a stumpage tax when cut.

New York cleared all former forestry acts from the books, and passed a yield tax law. Its law provides for tracts as small as five acres to pay an annual land tax with a six per cent stumpage tax when cut.

Other states passed measures intended to be constructive for the forestry industry, and in some, constitutional amendments are to be voted on at the November election.

THE TARIFF AND THE TROJAN HORSE

In discussing the tariff question, the San Francisco Chronicle makes the following startling comparison: "Finding the ancient city of Troy so well defended that they could not scale the walls, the Greek besiegers built a great wooden horse. Inside it, they hid some of the best warriors with their weapons. Then they dragged the wooden horse to the gates of Troy, left it there, and ran away.

The foolish Trojans went out and dragged the wooden horse inside their walls. And that night the Greek warriors came out of the horse, opened the gates of the city, and the Greeks waiting outside poured in. That was the finish of Troy.

"It happened many centuries ago, but the story of the Trojan horse goes on happening over and over again."

Like the great walls that protected Troy, the tariff wall protects American farmers and industries against ruinous competition. We cannot maintain the American standard of living, pay American wages, and then meet the price competition of foreign nations with lower standards and lower wages.

MINING PROSPERITY HELPS EVERYBODY

The mining industry has been able to deal successfully with most of the issues that have confronted it during the last few days, when high costs, limited markets, high taxation, regulatory legislation, revision of freight rates, and other questions of more or less importance were exerting their influence upon sales, profits, credit, stabilization, labor relations, and general business conditions. The industry has won public confidence through the fair manner in which its leaders have presented the facts to law-making bodies and Government departments, and because their requests have not been unreasonable or improper. Many of the questions that confronted the industry during recent years have been disposed of satisfactorily to all concerned—the industry, the Government, and the public.

Western states particularly are dependent for their prosperity, upon the mining industry. It is to their interest to see that mining is encouraged, rather than hampered by restrictive taxation and legislation.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON—The western farmer's troubles mean a deal more to the city man than the latter realizes.

The western farmer, yes. The eastern farmer, yes. The eastern farmer's in a somewhat different class. For reasons which will appear, he's not so badly off. But the bulk of America's farming is done in the west.

Western agriculture is sick. If it took medicine and the medicine created only on western agriculture, for better or for worse, then it would matter only academically to the city man.

But here's a case where western agriculture takes medicine, and the city man, as well as western agriculture, feels the effects.

Soon after Secretary of Agriculture Jardine took office, a western farmer himself, I had a talk with him. Western agriculture was sick then. I asked him what he said, in effect.

For many years, farmers (veget and got land, for next to nothing, from the government. As the country settled up, this land grew more and more valuable. The farmer farmed. Maybe his farming didn't pay. But he was getting rich just the same because his land was appreciating faster than he was losing money on his crops.

Now all this free land is gone. New arrivals must buy it for what it is worth today. Then they must make money on their products, like manufacturers, or anybody else.

Make money from whom. From the city man.

Very Ritzy

Mrs. Florence Frisbee, 24, is the latest to be known as "queen of the bootleggers," because she and her husband, Carl, ran a very ritzy liquor and dope smuggling venture on the west coast, making profits of well over $1,000,000. After eluding federal agents for three years in a chase that extended across the United States, thence to Europe and back, they were caught in Chicago. They are being returned to Seattle for trial.

At Hotel Ashland—

IN STAGE COACH DAYS

Gold was the common medium of exchange. Checks were practically unknown. Just think for a moment how inconvenient it would be to return to the old methods of doing business.

Your checking account is one of the most convenient business assets you have. Don't abuse it.

A matter of time

When you first met one of the people now your friends, he was only a face and a name. You saw him often, listened to him, learned what he was doing, what his friends thought of him. . . . claimed him yourself as friend. It was only a matter of time.

It is only a matter of time before you will also claim as friend many a product which advertising is introducing to you. It may be a truer watch, a quieter door-closer, a longer wearing silk stocking, a better oil for your car. If you notice more in the advertisement than just appearance and name, you may want to be friends at once. You will learn what the product means to others and can helpfully mean to you. Advertisements tell you frankly all that makes a product friendly. Qualities, mannerisms—what the watch, door-closer, oil is in the habit of doing. Advertisements make you acquainted before you give the product your faith. Since you choose your friends often, why not keep your choice wise!
