LONDON DISCUSSES LATEST COSTUMES

LONDON — (AP) — London society is still gasping over the variety of costumes — some allegedly greatly abbreviated — worn by some of the guests who attended the mask dance given by the Duchesse of Sutherland at Hampton House.

Prominent among those attendees were the King and Queen of Spain, who did not appear in mask dress and the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince Henry, both of whom appeared in their dress.

Everybody was there and "everybody" in England means "Buried Alive in the Yokohama Quake" will be the subject of a special lecture to be given by Mrs. Moore on Saturday night.

She will touch on conditions in Japan before the disaster, and then recount her actual experience as their house fell on top of her, her rescue, and four days spent out on the mountain above the ruined city.

A little thing

The power called habit is a little thing... but it can pull your eyes open at a certain hour every morning, determining whether you dress the right or left foot first, drop a fixed amount of sugar into your breakfast coffee — free your mind for thoughts that demand actual choice.

The little habit of glancing over these advertising columns daily, checking this and that which appeal to you frees your mind from any guesswork about the merits of a product; helps you choose wisely when you buy. If you are familiar with advertisements, you can discriminate merits, weigh one product against another, these truths against those. And the habit of buying only advertised goods takes the hazard out of shopping; puts in a good, sturdy sure.
