I HAVEN'T TIME

One of the commonest expressions that is used today is: "I haven't time." Generally the person guilty of this remark is the one that nine times out of ten has the time. It is the person that is faithfully doing his work from day to day and yet has the time to add many outside activities to his curriculum; the one that finds time to read good literature; the one that works after the regular working hours to find a better way to conduct his business that is making his mark in the world. It has been said that it is a wise policy to grab opportunity by the forelock for it comes once in a lifetime. The person that is too busily wrapped up in his daily vocation to even consider other problems than those directly beneficial to him often passes up many opportunities that will never again pass his or her way.

Do you suppose that many great men that have been leaders in the affairs of the world were content to let away their unemployed moments in some leisurely manner in which no effort was spent to better his position in life? If such had been the case their names would not be listed as outstanding men.

Our lives are only what we make them. None of us are too busy but what we can find time to assist in much of the work of the many worthy organizations that are continually working to make this world a better place to live and at the same time will be helping ourselves.

If you are satisfied to simply say: "I haven't time," every time something is asked of you whether it be for your own good or for other causes, then too, we must be content with whatever our meager station in life might be. But if we can make every hour full of 60 minutes worth while, there can be but one way open—the path to success.

A COMPLIMENT TO UNITED STATES

"Whether it be a question of electricity supply, coal mines, or telephone service, the people who think, and are not, as Americans say, 'dead from the neck up,' are unanimously concerned today in settling once and for all the next question of municipal ownership," declares the British Electrical Review, leading industrial organ.

"The absence of clear thinking on this subject is largely the cause of high taxation and low wages, resulting in strikes, unrest and positive misery in some cases.

"The high standard of living of all classes in the United States is evident to the most casual observer, and the recent delegation of British Trade Unions saw that the reason lay largely in the extensive use of machinery and labor saving devices and the initiative displayed in American business organization.

"The rapid advance of the light and power industry in the United States is the envy of every foreign country, and the benefit of such a development is found in the solution of labor problems. If human beings are made the controllers of power instead of the generators, their earning power is so much increased as to make it possible to pay them not only a living wage, but a cultural wage.

"Private initiative is at the foundation of America's prosperity today and although there exist many government agencies to protect the public against abuses, this is quite a different thing from government ownership or subsidy."

BE CAREFUL WITH FIRES IN FORESTS

There is this about fire — when it is loose, you cannot whistle it back again. Unless it is stayed by enormous toil of men, or halted by natural obstacles, or drenched by rain, it will burn until it no longer finds materials for consumption.

Look at the ghosts of trees that rise from old scars on our mountains where forest fires have been. Nature will replant, but slowly. Men who were careless with fire put to naught her toil of a century. Be careful with fire, and then be more careful than ever. All this greenery, this coolness, this delightful beauty, may be blackened and made hideous by a single careless act.

The homes and industries of tomorrow may never be, if so much as a spark falls in this midsummer tinder. Be careful with fire. You cannot whistle it back.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES F. STEWART
NRA Service Writer
WASHINGTON — To Dr. C. H. Parker there's nothing so very humorous in the supposedly funny pictures one occasionally sees of a missionary or a fastway sailor about to be eaten up by cannibals.
He had such an experience himself once and he says he's prepared to go back that it isn't a bit amusing — except possibly to the cannibals.
Dr. Parker probably knows more about the South Sea Islands than any other white man living. For 31 years he has lived in that part of the world, and now, after a short visit in this country, he and his wife are going back there to die, when their time comes.
The doctor is a graduate of the Seventh Day Adventists' College of Medical Evangelists, at Loma Linda (Cal.)
The College of Medical Evangelists argues like this:
A South Sea Island cannibal falls sick. The other cannibals, untrained in medicine, don't know what to do for him.
Along comes a good doctor and cures him.

THE FORUM

Articles of timely interest are welcomed under this head. Communications must bear the signature of the author.

Editor of Ashland Tidings—
The water situation is a question which demands the immediate organized effort of every citizen in Ashland, and it seems to me we have six men supposed to be of average intelligence and ability who ought to see, and be able to bring about immediate action. Why delay until November, election cannot locations be agreed upon, and immediate removal of timber from said sites begun? The timber removed and brush burned, and bonds voted, would be a tremendous start toward advancement. In truth and reality an election called at once would need but one polling cost but a trifle, and it seems to me the city has suffered enough in the past years by gas and blurring and delaying the real issue. If these six men of the Council cannot do this, I am assured I can select six women that would bring the matter about.

Burglars Enjoy Selves in Home Of Other People

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Burglars moved into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan H. Brandt while they were on a vacation, made themselves comfortable, and took $7,000 worth of furs, clothing and pre-Volstead wine. The beds had been occupied, there were many unwashed dishes, and razor blades and soiled linen were scattered about the bathroom.

Earthquake Talk Planned Tonight

Evangelist B. B. Moore announces for his subject tonight at the Ashland Chautauque, "Resurrection—High Lights of the Japanese Earthquake" with a special jubilee musical program. Speaking first on the subject "In The Days of His Preparation," the evangelist read from the second chapter of Nahum, "The chariots shall be with ravens in the day of his preparation—the chariots shall race in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall run like the lightning." He points out the fact that this old prophet lived there 700 years before Christ looked down the ages and saw the swarming automobiles of today. Reading on, "The gates of the rivers shall be opened," Mr. Moore says that refers to the opening of the Panama canal. And he says when Gen. Allenby entered Jerusalem in December, 1917, with head bared and without firing a shot and with the British always circling over the city ahead of the army—it was in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah, "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem, defending also he will deliver it."
With the Clark singers, the jubilee song, and the earthquake lecture tonight's service promises to be interesting.

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 14.—(UP)—A common, old-fashioned compass, guider of many a mariner over petulant seas in the days when its brasswork shone, relegated to the role of landlubber refused to outlive its usefulness and now has "outsmarted" even the smartest prospectors of Sonora county.
Scores of prospectors made feeble attempts to find, on the east slope of Mount Provo, near Sonora, a rocky ledge where a rich gold vein was believed to be hidden. Among them was R. N. Klempfer, Martinez, owner of the compass.
After repeated failures he took a "long shot" and went over the ground with the compass. The needle remained calm until he got off the beaten path of his prospectors.
