VOTE THE STREET BONDS

Every Ashland citizen who believes in progress, development and fair play should go to the polls tomorrow and vote for the $5000 street fund bond issue.

Early this summer the council embarked on a program of street and sidewalk improvements in that district popularly known as the normal school improvement district.

But the cross streets must be improved in keeping with the improvements for which the property owners have paid.

The improvement was so much larger than ordinary, however, that there is not sufficient money in the street fund to complete the city's share of this work.

If the bond issue should fail, the cost of improving these streets must be paid by the property owners who have already been heavily assessed.

It is our duty to go to the polls. It is our duty to authorize the $5000 street bond issue.

MANUFACTURING BUTTRESSES TRADE

Evidence that the United States has come to rely upon its manufacturing rather than upon its natural resources alone for its exporting supremacy is disclosed in an analysis of our world trade for the first quarter of 1926 made by the Department of Foreign Commerce of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In spite of the excess of imports over exports in recent months, the trade is marked by an increase in export. "Our export's of finished manufactured goods for the first quarter of 1926," the analysis reveals, "increased 15 per cent in value when every other great group declined severely."

BUSINESS ARBITRATES

Arbitration, as a means of adjusting trade controversies and as an instrument of self-regulation, is found to be a rapidly growing institution in American business by the Domestic Distribution Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

An analysis of 16 typical arbitration systems now functioning, made for the National Trade Relations Committee shows that compulsory arbitration is enforced by the American Spice Trade Association, the Grain Dealers National Association, the National-American Wholesale Lumber Association, the National Council Lighting Fixtures Manufacturers and the National League of Commission Merchants.

The food group, consisting of the American Wholesale Grocers Association, the National Cannery Association, the National Dried Fruit Association, the National Food Brokers Association and the National Wholesale Grocers Association, have adopted uniform arbitration rules and maintains joint arbitration boards in the principal cities of the United States.

The leather group, consisting of the Tanners Council and the shoe manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers associations, also has adopted uniform rules.

Ample evidence is seen by the Chamber to justify the conclusion that business is embarking upon a program of self regulation.

LAKE AGAIN RECEDES TO PROVE OLD STORY

LAKEVIEW, Ore. — (UP) — As the waters parted in the Red Sea to allow the children of Israel to reach the land of "milk and honey," so did they recede at Goose Lake, Oregon, to allow the seekers of gold, in the days following the rash of '49, enroute in emigrant trains, to pass over its smooth bed.

It was Indians, not Egyptians the emigrants sought to elude. The story of how they outwitted the Indians by jutting away from the original Oregon Trail and traversing a stretch of the lake bed, was told by the settlers themselves, but doubted.

Recently the emigrants' story has received belated confirmation. The waters of the lake again receded and where the lake once nestled a scant sheet of not more than five miles of water remains.

With the old floor of the lake exposed, traces of the rutted wheel tracks made by the wagons and oxcaris remained, a silent legend of the romance of three-quarters of a century ago.

WHEN THE OLD BACK ACHES! Just how hard it is for a man (or a woman, either) with an aching back to nerve himself up to his task, no one but the sufferer can tell.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES F. STEWART NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts is not a very talkative politician.

This is fortunate, because, when he does say something political, it generally is something that would have been, politically, far better left unsaid.

His recent offering on the subject of the tariff was a case in point. The tariff is an excellent thing, just now, for Democrats to discuss. At worst they risk nothing by doing it and they may gain votes by it.

As all men know, industrial eastern Republicanism likes the present high tariff, because it protects the industries.

As everybody knows further, agricultural western Republicanism wants the tariff lowered, on the ground that it doesn't protect farm products but does make the farmers pay excessive prices for everything they have to buy.

Nobody doubts that the industrial folk will do their best to hang onto protection, but it's clear that they should make as little noise about it as possible, lest they enrage the farmers into voting the other way or turning insurgent.

Now along comes Senator Butler with the remark that the tariff not only isn't too high, but, so far as his particular industry textiles — is concerned, it isn't high enough. That, he adds, is what is the matter with the textile industry, which is depressed or professes to be.

BEST THINKING IS IN COLD WEATHER

OXFORD — (UP) — Maning does its best thinking when the weather is a little too cold for comfort, according to Professor H. J. Fleure, surveying the year's advance in anthropology before the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

"We must not argue too crudely that man's 'ideal climate' is the climate of the region in which modern man originated," he said.

"The most we can say, in that respect, is that as his constitution seems attuned to certain climatic conditions, those conditions are probably not very far from the conditions obtaining in the region in which he evolved, admitting at the same time that quite possibly he migrated into a region colder than the one to which he was accustomed and so gained, perhaps, an access of vigor."

"Certainly man's mental processes are most active at a temperature below that the greatest comfort physically. One has gone so far as to venture the suggestion that the great mental advance of the fully human condition of the race probably occurred in a cold, bracing period, perhaps one of the later phases of the 'Ice Age.'

"The conditions that make us today function most actively are those of a climate with temperatures usually varying between 70 degrees and 20 degrees Fahrenheit, without too long spells at either of these limits, with enough but not too much bright sunshine

Camel—the greatest tobacco word of all time

NEVER in the history of smoking has there been such a cigarette as Camel. No other cigarette was ever made welcome in so many millions of homes, because no other ever brought so much enjoyment to smokers.

patronage than any other cigarette ever had. Why? Because Camels contain the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. Because Camels never tire the taste, no matter how liberally you smoke them. Because they never leave a cigarette after-taste. The world's largest tobacco organization puts the utmost quality into this one cigarette.

When Camels came into the world they brought an entirely new sense of smoking satisfaction and enjoyment. Millions who have tried them all, who could well afford to pay more, will smoke only Camels. Camels on the table mean that this is the home of experienced smokers.

If you want the mellowest mildness that ever came from a cigarette, try Camels. Regardless of what you are willing to pay, you will find in this famous smoke every fine feature you ever looked for in a cigarette.
