BELLVIEW NOTES

Mrs. W. G. Tucker
Phone 2F14

Mrs. Lusonne Carter, county superintendent of schools, was a visitor in Bellview Wednesday. She also paid the Neil Creek school a visit, and inspected the new school house.

Mrs. J. J. Myers, mother of Mrs. F. C. Homes who has been quite ill for some days is reported as much better.

A big barn on the old Welles place, which is on the part of the estate that is being made in to the new golf course, has been torn down and the big timbers made into fit shape for hauling away. This barn was an old landmark—having been built probably as long ago as the first homes in this end of the valley—along in the fifties or sixties.

Mrs. George Harkins and son, Phil, and Mrs. Rufus King and Gates, made a trip to the fish hatchery at Hornbrook last Thursday. Besides having a fine trip, they brought home some splendid salmon from the hatchery.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Homes spent the week-end with Frank's mother, and other relatives, arriving last Saturday night. When it was found they were coming, a hasty surprise and shower was planned for the newlyweds. So after a dancing party at Jackson's, made use of to while away the hours, a bunch of relatives and friends dropped in on them, laden down with many useful, ornamental and fun-making gifts. Also they brought lots of food things to eat, and though it would never do to tell, just the same it was not long until daylight when the party at last disbanded.

M. Woodworth, pastor of the Baptist church, was a caller in Bellview Tuesday.

A committee of four, composed of Mrs. James Lennox of Valley View community, Mrs. W. G. Tucker, of Bellview, and Mr. Poley and Mr. Joy, of the Ashland Library Board, paid a visit to the county court in Jacksonville Wednesday. Their mission, while not seeming at the present to have gained much, is an opening wedge and in time these communities know they will get what they have asked for. And that is a right to pay our county library tax of 2-10 of a mill into the Ashland library, when they have so long and faithfully served these rural communities. It is a wonderful privilege to be able to get books that we want at the Ashland library, and these communities feel that they should have a right to say where they will have their library tax paid.

Everyone is anxious to go ahead with the building of the community house, and before long we will have a report to make, of it being started. The Neil Creek school equipment was moved into the new school house Saturday, and with a few adjustments, everything will be working smoothly. The whole community is glad for Neil Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Murry Murphy and three children have moved into Ashland where the children may have the advantage of the city schools.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Just why a governorship should be regarded by politicians as a better taking off place than a senatorship for a presidential nomination is not very clear.

However, the belief certainly exists. It may be a mere superstition. It may have been worked out on logical lines.

At all events, the individual who has been stung by the presidential bee seems always to show a preference for a preliminary seat in some gubernatorial chair than for one in the United States Senate.

A Senator is in the nation's eye. He's in his state's eye, too. Perhaps he isn't in the latter at quite such short range, but a politician must be pretty close to his state or it doesn't send him to the Senate in Washington.

Besides, if there's anything in proverbs, "distance lends enchantment to view." A governor is engaged with humdrum affairs at home. A senator is mixed in huge romantic federal affairs of state.

A senator has a voice in the destinies of all the states; a governor has a voice in the destinies of only one.

It looks as if a senator, tried out nationally, would be the man for the whole country to pick for a presidential candidate. But no, if politicians are right the country prefers governors—satisfactory to individual states, but who knows if they'll prove satisfactory on a large scale?

Warren G. Harding!—Well, he was a senator, but that was an accident.

Woodrow Wilson was a governor. Calvin Coolidge was a governor. He was nominated only as vice-president, to be sure, but it was on his gubernatorial record.

Filling Their Fathers' Shoes

The sons are coming to the top in American industry, stepping into the shoes worn by their fathers. Charles Edson, son of the famous inventor, Thomas A. Edison, has become president of his father's $100,000,000 concern, while Edsel Ford, is assuming more and more of the duties of his father, Henry Ford. Charles Edson is shown above, with Edsel Ford inset.
