

"DEAR BRUTUS" TO COME HERE OCT. 16

More Olsen Players Will Present Play at Normal School

"Dear Brutus" is coming to the Normal School, Oct. 16th. The Moren Olsen Players are bringing it. Sir James M. Barrie wrote "Peter Pan." He has written a number of other plays just as good. Dear Brutus is one of them.

Sir James M. Barrie ought to be the happiest man in the world. Not because he has contributed so much happiness to so many people, thought that ought to be a source of joy in dark hours, but because he is one of those extremely rare artists who can actually embody their conceptions. His dreams come true. At his desk, he is visited by visions so fantastic, that he must often laugh aloud in solitude, but the amazing thing is that he can make the whole world see them as he sees them. The tragic disparity between conception and execution that tortures even accomplished artists, vanishes here before the creative power of genius.

Mr. Barrie is a great playwright because he understands human nature, knows how to represent it in conversation and in action, has enormous sympathy with his characters, and what is equally important, has enormous sympathy with his audience. His plays are full of action and yet the story of each play can usually be given in a few sentences. What is it then, keeps the audience at strained attention? If some characters ask a question, we would not miss the answer for all the world. His people capture us almost instantly, because, while composing the play, their creator himself felt their reality. They were right there, in the room with him. He saw their faces and heard their voices. In a conversation with John D. Williams, he said, "It is my contemptible weakness, that if I say a character smiled vacuously, I must smile vacuously if he frowns or lears, I frown or leer; if he is a coward and given to contortions, I cringe, or twist my legs until I have to stop writing to undo the knot. I bow with him, eat with him, and gnaw my mustache with him. If the character be a lady with an exquisite laugh, I suddenly terrify you by laughing exquisitely. One reads of the astounding versatility of an actor who is stout and lean on the same evening, but what is he to the novelist who is a dozen persons within the hour? Morally, I fear, we must deteriorate; but that is a subject I must wisely edge away from."
