NARROW ESCAPE IN FLORIDA IS RELATED

Relative of Local People Nearly Loses Life in

Details of the narrow escape from death of L. E. Gould, brother-in-law of Mrs. H. W. Andrews in the Mismin disaster have just been received. Mr. Gould, with the members of the household, where he roomed barely escaped when the house collapsed at 3:00 a, m. that tragic morning, Starting to take refuge in a vacant house near, they were knocked down when it went off it foundapeople across the street, whose home withstood th 100 mile wind. There they stayed until morning, when in a lull in the storm he, with two others, drove down to one of the main thoroughfares to see the damage.

They had hardly arrived when the storm started again and the party was marooned in an empty house until three p. m.

The streets ran rivers of water. Roofs were torn off and buildings crumpled up as they watched. The storm lasted 15 hours.

Mr. Gould writes that conditions are much worse than the outside world realizs. Everyone has been given typhoid serum. The city is a scene of desolation. It was 24 hours before he
