Here's Safest Aviator

Captain H. D. Campbell, U. S. M. C., who has flown 2500 miles without a mishap, and the plane he is using.

By NEA Service SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 14.—Meet the world's safest aviator—Captain H. D. Campbell of the United States marine flying corps.

He has flown 2500 hours, probably 250,000 miles—since he became an aviator in 1921, with a perfect record of safe flights and landings. In the last year he has been in the air 840 hours without a crack-up.

Captain Campbell recently won the Herbert Schiff memorial trophy for his excellence as a safe pilot. Now he's preparing to fly to Washington, where President Coolidge will hand him the trophy.

A Vermont The flier will accept the award from the president with keen appreciation of the honor, for both hail from Vermont.

By his remarkable record, Captain Campbell becomes known as the safest aviator in the world. And, strangely enough, on the very day he learned that he was awarded the trophy, he nearly marred his record by a forced landing in the mountains east of here. Captain Campbell, with a party of other marine aviators, was cruising about. Suddenly his motor slowed, and continued to turn more slowly, until he floated near the mountain. Just as he was about to "crack," the motor suddenly took life and all was well. A carburetor float had stuck, and became free just in time to save ship and pilot.

Record Unrivaled The record that Captain Campbell made during the last year is a world's mark, for no airman in the service of any other nation has as yet so many hours in the air without a crash to his credit.

The marine flier first entered aviation as a student at Pensacola, Fla., in 1921, and a year later was an instructor in aviation at various marine bases.

Previously he had served with the famous marine second division in the Verdun trenches, at Belleau Wood, and in nearly all other major offensives after the United States entered the war.

Expert Gunner In addition to winning the safety trophy, he has been highly commended by the secretary of the navy for making the highest free machine gun score from a field of 460 contestants. He made 93 hits out of a possible 97 in nine seconds at 90 miles an hour!

Later he made a perfect bombing record when he scored four direct hits out of four bombs dropped 4000 feet. During the recent aviation meet at Denver, marine air forces under Captain Campbell's command received prizes for the best formation flying and landing.
