cessively normal." George's mother, Mary Ball Washington, is given no credit at all, and is described as of deficient education and a "hard, querulous, managing manner." Even Washington, the biographer says, was "not educated up to the level of his class." "Early in life," Woodward says, Washington began to fumble with love. It was really fumbling, for he was never at ease in the technique of love and love-making. In the presence of women he would often lose his simple forthright manner and turn himself into a pompous and mouthy sentimentalist—or also remain spellbound and silent.

BELLVIEW NOTES

Mrs. W. G. Tucker Phone 2F14

The many friends of Mrs. Jewell are glad to know that she is at home with her small daughter, Joan Augusta, after so long a time. And we all are in love with the baby's name! A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. F. Johnson, Saturday, Oct. 9. The Johnsons live on what is best known as the Holburn place on the old stage road, south. The mother and child were both doing very well at last report. The meeting of the Upper Valley Community Club, which was held at the home of Mrs. C. A. Brown, Tuesday, Oct. 12, was well attended and proved an unqualified success. The president, Mrs. Gotsche, called the meeting to order, the minutes of all special meetings during the summer were read, followed by a lengthy business session. Everything of interest was disposed of with alacrity. Mrs. Mary Homes Tucker was elected to the office of secretary-treasurer to take the place of Mrs. Nell Peachy Dunn resigned and the program committee took charge.

house grows apace! Though many people are so busy with the picking of their fruit that they just can't stop right now, in a few days we will have many more ready to help. The trusses are being cut, and Wednesday will see them being raised into place. Though they are not large, only for a thirty foot span, it requires the work of those who know how to put them up. Mr. De Mille, the well known sign artist, who has a shop in Ashland, but whose home is in Bellview, is making a sign to be hung by the new community house, announcing its construction. This will be an asset, for a number of people have already passed, stopped and wondered, "what is going on there." Among some of our later donors is W. D. Jackson of the Palace Lunch, who sent out word that he would send us a man this week to work on the house, and this at Jack's expense, for several days. QUEEN MARIE STRIKES TWO SNAGS IN HER POPULAR WAVE (Continued from page 1.) ty to dress for dinner. Marie had on the same dress she wore when she stepped off the Leviathan this morning, but apparently the party is well supplied with changes of costumes for its three day itinerary of Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Thirty more bags went to a hotel where the remainder of the entourage is staying. The queen looks just like her pictures, is extremely well dressed, has shorter skirts and is a trifle heavier than you might think, and is handsome, but distinctly middle-aged. The legation was jammed with flowers, including great baskets of chrysanthemums and Easter lilies and more boxes were coming. Marie wore a corsage of orchids and both she and the princess carried bouquets which members of the diplomatic corps brought to her in the station.

CLAIM AMEE WAS TRYING TO FOOL HER MOTHER (Continued From Page One) "Up until that time no one could have told me the 'old lady' wasn't in on the scheme," Miss Morris said her employer told her. After the death of McKinley, his secretary was solicited to carry on the "work" he had started, she asserted. During one of her visits to Angelus temple, Miss Morris said the evangelist declared her willingness to give $1,500 to the "two men" who were purported to believed to have talked to McKinley. One Hundred Tons—Horseheadish Romi & Orsell of Heaverton have a horseheadish farm of 23 acres that is attracting considerable attention. The farm is better dam, tiled, and from it they have sold one hundred tons; 50 tons of grade No. 1 and nearly the same of grades No. 2 and No. 3. The owners say they cannot supply the orders received and that there are ready markets on the Pacific coast for far more of the roots than they can produce. READ TIDINGS CLASS ADS An Interview (By Claire Prybylaski) I had the pleasure to meet Moroni Olsen, the dramatic players out of his role as an actor, and gained an opportunity to judge him as a man. After the first few moments of the interview I was perfectly at home—he seemed to understand just what I wanted and was very willing to do most of the talking. The first impression that I received of Moroni Olsen was his gallantry—or perhaps I should say his courtesy. He arose when I introduced myself and thereupon I received my second impression, his height. He is extremely tall, more so to me perhaps—but I am positive he is well over six feet. At first his height rather overcame me—but a moment later came assurance. He always looks directly at one when speaking and that helped me immensely for his eyes express sincerity and a thorough ability of understanding. He impressed me as being very sympathetic and has a decidedly humorous element in his makeup. Mr. Olsen is very much interested in institutions of higher learning and endeavors to have his plays sponsored by them whenever it is possible. His company is more like a large family, and has the distinction of being intact from the time of its first inception, four years ago. A few incidents which occurred during my visit showed me how democratically he treats his co-workers. He was just as courteous to his electrician as he was to any other member of his company. It is very clear to me why Mr. Olsen is the successful actor and director that we know he is. His unlimited ability to understand people, sympathy, his never failing humor and his inherent courtesy, make him the great man that he is.

IS ARRESTED ON VISIT TO PRISON After his release Brigearts worked steadily at it for a year. Then he thought of a San Quentin friend, who he decided to visit. Appearing at the prison with the request that he be allowed to see this former companion, Brigearts was recognized as an convict. To make matters worse Brigearts denied the charge. Fingerprints and a photograph were taken and his identity was proved. In California's penal is a statute making Brigearts's action a misdemeanor. He therefore had violated terms of his parole. Brigearts is now in the gloomy San Quentin dungeon. Prison officials said that he would be transferred to Folsom prison to work out the three remaining years of his term on the rocks of that institution.
