THE DAILY TIDINGS EDITORIAL and FEATURE PAGE

ESTABLISHED IN 1876

C. J. READ, Managing Editor

W. H. PERKINS, News Editor

PUBLISHED BY THE ASHLAND PRINTING CO.

ASHLAND DAILY TIDINGS intered at the Ashland, Oregon Postoffice as Second Class Mail Matter

What Medford Will Do

In another part of today's Tidings appears a paid advertisement which should set at rest propoganda advanced to the effect that Medford will not do as it says it will in the matter of providing free dffice space for the court house, and will not denate a free site to the county, when officials feel that the time has come to erect a new building.

An exact reproduction of the resolution adopted by the Medford City council is run as a paid advertisement by those advocating the removal of the county seat. This resolution sets out clearly the fact that the City of Medford has agreed to build a building, having approximately twice as much office space as the present court house, and furthermore to let the county of Jackson County use it for a period of five years at a rental of $1.00 per year. This resolution further says that when the time comes for the erection of a building the council will give to the County of Jackson a suitable site WITHOUT CHARGE.

It doesn't seem possible that anything could be more clear. It would seem that propoganda advanced to convey any other impression was concocted out of whole cloth, is misleading and should be absolutely disregarded. It is evidently the last minute effort of the part of those who feel that there is a hopeless cause to bolster up their waning forces and garner a few undeserved votes.

Jackson county should vote overwhelmingly in favor of the county seat removal. The issues have been completely forgotten by propoganda such as that given above. Voters should keep this fact in mind, that something is going to be done about the court house and it remains for them to say whether money shall be spent upon the old building or whether a new one shall be erected for the benefit of the greatest number of people.

Your Vote is Important

The Tidings during the present campaign has refrained from committing itself editorially on the paramount question that confronts local voters, the water bonds. Our only reason for taking this attitude was due to the fact that the editor was so new to this community that it was felt any attempt to either commend or discourage any proposition of so much concern to the future of this city, with only a superficial knowledge of the facts, would place us in the position of sponsoring that which we knew nothing of.

We do, however, feel that we have done our duty, in letting the public get the facts. Every day, for the past several weeks, under the front page caption of "That the People May Know" there has appeared every bit of information possible to secure. The members of the city council have done all in their power to give the people everything there was on the proposition in order that they might vote intelligently. No body of men could do more and we feel that no newspaper could better serve than through this action.

Now, voters of Ashland, it is up to you to do your duty. You have the facts, your vote tomorrow may decide either favorably or otherwise the destiny of your city. Vote as you think best on the water bonds, but always keep in mind this fact, that the future of the city of Ashland is more important than any personal feeling you may experience. Let this one thing be the guiding spirit of your voting.

The Hallowe'en Spirit

While Hallowe'en has been given a religious significance as the eve of All Saints Day, in practice it partakes of something contrary to what we would expect of saints. In fact, in celebration of it we follow far more nearly the ancient pagan methods than those of a Christian people, which may be taken as evidence that, despite our boasts, our veneer is thin and paganism lies near the surface.

It was an old-time belief that Hallowe'en was the date when ghosts and witches were most likely to roam abroad. This seems to be true still. Though we may deny belief in supernatural manifestations, that we still delight to assume grotesque forms and indulge in fantastic performances affords evidence of the slow process of eliminating superstitions.

Of course it is childhood and youth to which Hallowe'en is especially pleasing. Pranks which at any other time would be taboo may be played then with justification, provided the perpetrators be not

Kiddies' Evening Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

On Through Snow

"You don't suppose it is going to be too long a trip, do you?" John

He had hated asking that question. He was ready to go on any trip into this land of his, but that should take the first long sleigh ride, taking Trotty with him, and should run danger of a blizzard was something quite different.

He had not wanted to ask the question, so Trotty would think he was just considering her. That would have been an insult to want to say it so it appeared he was in the slightest bit alarmed. For that would have been non-When storms were at their John and his father had enjoyed them most. But if he just suggested that, because of their late start and the heavy fall of ised to be a bad storm.

"Of course not!" Trotty said.
And then added hastly, high-spir-snow, the trip might be too long, he might save Trotty what prom-

"Well, maybe not. There is al-"Trotty, you shouldn't say such things." Yet he did think that if they turned now it might be better when they were as near one place as the other. Yet he could not say more. It would sound as though he were afraid-and certainly that was far from the truth. So they drove on, down the road through the woods. There was just the road cut through the bush, trees on either side so dense and thick that it was easy to believe, even if they had not known, how the little wild animals lived there free from cvilization, though never free from their own enemies, never free from their own enemies, their own problems of life struggle. How deliciously it smelt! "Nowhere," Trotty said, "does the country smell so deliciously.

"It's perfect now. And even here, quite a little bit back from the sea, I can feel that there is salt air near, and the trees, all these blessed spruce and fir trees, are so good to smell."

How lovely they did look with the heavy white snow settling down upon the dark green of the woods, how cold and crisp and wonderful the air.

But John had been right. This was not an ordinary snow storm, but a true blizzard, such as they, but a true blizzard, such as they, in their country, called a blizzard. The snow seemed to become thicker and whiter as they drove on through it. Almost it seemed as though they were going into a land that was solid snow with more and more snow being constantly added so that it would not lose its entirely snow-bried look.

It was getting darker now. The sky was so filled with snowflakes, the whole air was so engulfed by snow, that the trees but a little back from the road were quite indistinct.

It was as though there was just indistinct.

It was as though there was just this road, an edge of snow-covered trees on either side, and thence, all around them a world of snow.

The road could not be seen ahead. Only Daniel, shaking his ears, went hurrying on, making a trembling, neighing sound at the swirling snow.

swirling snow.

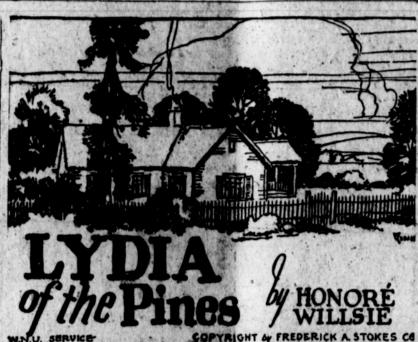

"Oh, Trotty," John said, "if it doesn't get any worse, this is great." So on they drove through the snow.

(A 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

DAILY BIBLE PASSAGE

"Finally, brethern, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue,
and if there be any praise,
think on these things." Phil.
4:8.

Some mighty good suggestions for those whose thoughts are wont to wander. "We canin our hair." not keep the birds from lighting on our heads, but we can keep them from making nests playing by the lake, are accessed by an old squaw from the hearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her fa-ther calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

(Continued From Yesterday)

THE STORY

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's healt fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her hear Reaching the age of fitteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" togeth-er. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

(Now go on with the story)

plied Charlie, "you're like most of the other whites around here. You see a chance to get land and you'd crucify each other if you needed to. to get it. What chance do Indians stand? But I tell you this," his voice sank to a hoarse whisper and his eyes looked far beyond her, "if there is a God of the Indians as well as the whites, you'll pay some day! You'll pay as we are pay-

"Lydla shivered. "Don't talk so. Charlie. I wish I knew all about it, the truth about it. If I was a nan, you bet before I voted I'd "Look here, Lydia," exclaimed Charlie, "why don't you come up on the reservation for a camping trip, next summer, for a week or so?"

"Costs too much," said Lydla.

"Wouldn't, either. I can get tents and it wouldn't cost you anything but your share of the food. Kent'll go and maybe one of the teachers would chaperon."

Lydia's eyes kindled. "Gee, Charlie, perhaps it could be fixed! got, nine months to earn the money in. It's something to look forward to." Charlie nodded and moved away

"You'll learn things up there you never dreamed of," he said. The conversation with John Le vine did not take place until the Sunday before the election. The Sunday before the election. The fight in the congressional district had increased in bitterness as it went on. Family feuds developed. Ancient family skeletons regarding the pine grafts and Indian looting saw the light of day.

On the Saturday a week before election Lydia went to pay her duty call on Margery. Elviry admitted her.

"Margery'll be right down," said

Elviry. "She's just finished her "Her what?" inquired Lydia, po-

"Her what?" inquired Lydia, politely.

"Her nap. A New York beauty doctor told me to have her take one every day. She went to the hop' last night. She looked lovely in a cream chiffon. One of the college professors asked who was that little beauty. Come in, Margery."

Margery strolled into the room in a bright red kimono. "How de do, Lydia," she said.

"Hello, Margery. Want to play paper dolls?"

"Paper dolls?"

"Paper dolls!" shricked Elviry.

'Gee, Charlle, Perhaps It Could Be

e my New York clothes?' "No, thank you," answered Lydia. "I'd just as soon not. I've got to "What's in that big bundle?"

asked Elviry, pointing to the huge paper parcel in Lydia's lap. "Nothing," she said shortly, look-ing at the rope portieres in the

"I got new ones in the East," said Elviry, following her glance. "Shells strung together. But I put 'em up only when we have parties. Who made your shirtwaist, Lydia?"
"I did," answered Lydia, not

"I thought so," commented Elviry. "I don't suppose your fa-ther's had a raise, yet. He ain't that kind. Does he pay Levine any rent for that cottage?" "Of course, every month!" ex-

"Oh! I just asked! Your fa-ther's been talking strong for him at the plow factory, they say, and we just wondered. He's old enough to be your father, but you're getting to be a young lady now, Lydia, and it's very bad for your reputation to be seen with him. You haven't any mother and I must speak."

"I don't see how John Levine's reputation about Indians or pine lands can hurt me any," protested Lydfa, angrily, "and I just think you're the impolitest person I

The front door slammed as she spoke and Dave Marshall came in. "Hello! Well, Lydia, this is a sight for sore eyes. Thought you'd forgotten us." He looked from his two women folks to Lydia. "What have you two been saying now?" he asked gruffly.

have you two been saying now?" he asked gruffly.

Elviry tossed her head. "Nothing at all. You said that Lydia and Amos ought to be warned about Levine."

"Yes, I did." exclaimed Dave, with a sudden change of voice.

"Yes, tall your father to come."

"Yes, I did," exclaimed Dave, with a sudden change of voice. "You tell your father to come round and see me this evening, Lydia. I don't like his attitude on the reservation question. Tell him if I can't change his views any other way, I may have to bring pressure with that note."

Lydia buttoned her coat with trembling fingers.

"Yes, sir, I'll tell him," she said. "We'll pay that note up, somehow. Even it can't be allowed to keep us from believing what we believe." Her voice strengthened suddenly. "What's the use of being an American if you can't believe what you want to? I'm not going to tell my father to come to see you. I'll answer right now. We'll think and say what we please and you can do whatever you want to about that nasty old note."

Dave suddenly laughed. "There, Elviry, that's what I mean about Lydia, being the real thing. You can't help my being your friend, Lydia, no matter what happens. But," grimly, "I'll call in that note unleds your father shuts up."

"Good-by!" exclaimed Lydia, abruptly, and she marched into the hall, head held high, and closed the outside door firmly behind her.

(Continued Tomorrow)

Tidings Ads Bring Results

BY CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 .- The nd of the year 1927 will see the inited States leading the world n aviation.

nt secretary of commerce, in ton. Large of aeronautics, says Trubee Davison, assistant sec retary of war, in charge of aeronautics, corroborates MacCracken. Edward Pearson Warner, assistant secretary of the navy, in charge of aeronautics, corroborates both MacCracken and Davi-

That makes it unanimous.

Incidentally, according to Waren Irving Glover, assistant postnaster general, in charge of aernautics, more mail already travels by air routes in the United States than in any other country.

Commercial aviation is at a disadvantage in America, as compared with Europe, because there t is subsidized by the governments, while here public sentiment will not permit it. Only two american flying concerns are making money, MacCrasken reports, while the others, at best, are only breaking even, and some re losing.

MacCracken's problem is to ncourage more Americans ravel and ship by air.

Rates inevitably will be higher here than abroad, because of the Art Club Meetsforeign companies' subsidies. Mrs. C. E. Eib was the gracious That, however, does not matter so much, since Americans, having more money, can afford to pay Arlington - A.

Umapine farmers are selling William P. MacCracken, assist- fourth crop of alfalfa, at $13 a piarist, will have 16,000 pounds oney this year.

what they want no matter what it we'en colors.

ostess at a meeting of the Art Club at her home on Van Ness Avenue Monday evening, October more, and seem inclined to have

> The evening was happily spent playing cards and embroidering. after which delicious refreshmenst were served at tables artistically decorated in dainty Hallo-

The next meeting will be on Monday, November eighth.

IF YOU WERE LAID-UP OR LAID-OFF?

How long would you last if you lost your job? If somthing should hold back your weekly wage, how long could you hold out on the money you have saved? Suppose you had nothing saved?

Have you the reserve to stand a long "seige" of sickness or unemployment?

Ask yourself these qustions and if you haven't a savings account here, start one today. Make regular deposits and be ready both for emergencies and opportunities.

The Citizens Bank of Ashland

Ashland, Oregon

It's Up To You

Do You Really Want More Water or Do You Want More Procrastination?

YOU, MR. AND MRS. VOTER, MUST ANSWER THIS QUESTION AT THE POLLS TUESDAY.

Have you already forgotten the shortage of this past summer?

Don't you recall the parched lawns, the ruined home gardens, the deplorable condition of our beautiful Lithia Park?

THESE MEN FAVOR MORE WATER IMMED-IATELY. THEY ARE LOOKING AFTER YOUR INTERESTS. IT'S DANGEROUS TO SWAP HORSES NOW!

VOTE FOR:

S. A. Peters, Sr. S. D. Taylor Thornton Wiley Wirt M. Wright

VOTE THE WATER BONDS

KEEP THESE MEN IN OFFICE LET'S GIVE ASHLAND A CHANCE TO GROW!

(Paid Adv.)