ASHLAND DAILY TIDINGS

OUT OUR WAY

By Williams

Washington

From the press notices of Rupert Hughes' new biography of Washington it seems safely predictable that the author is going to catch a lot more hell from those who are convinced that he is engaged in a dastardly attempt to run down the father of his country.

Kiddies' Evening Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
Old Trundle Bed
For years the trundle bed, had been up in the attic. It had been very happy up there, though it had known better days.

LYDIA of the Pines

By Honor Willis
CHAPTER I
The Camp.

Lydia resumed a mild flirtation with Olga that he had dropped when school closed and Olga met him more than half way.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished parents...

Lydia swung her feet contentedly. "There! I feel happier," said Kent as he threw away the empty sardine cans.

What Others Say

(Portland Spectator)
The "country editor" is so-called because he owns and edits his paper outside the "big city;" the editors of the big city are rarely, if ever the owners of the papers they edit.

Isn't It Odd?

PORTLAND, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Mary Shaw didn't intend to break the law but inadvertently broke it by mixing the laws of hospitality and those of prohibition.

Local Issues in National Affairs

It is a queer commentary upon our national political system that in the campaign that ended with last Tuesday's elections, nearly every successful candidate for the upper and lower houses of congress won not because they stood upon platforms containing planks of national importance, but rather because of issues that were purely local in their import.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate.

State street, Chicago, has been made a "white way." So many wrong persons were shot in the dark.

Mrs. B. P. Rosencrans and children returned to Ashland last Thursday after spending the week at the home of her father William Flipper, at Gold Hill.

Normal Notes—Bennie Gates, Elsie Baker, James McDowell, May Mow and Donald Helms of Ashland entered the training school last week.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed.
