Operations Progressing
 Operations upon the installation of a revolving fish screen at Savage Rapids dam in the Rogue river are progressing satisfactorily, according to W. R. Coleman, state superintendent of screens, who is in charge of the work. Staging already has been erected and at present men are drilling holes in the face of the dam for the actual installation of the screen, which will be the first of its kind ever tried out in the United States. Water having been drained out of the dam, fish are already said to be accumulating by the thousands for several feet below the man-made obstruction.
