In the last quarter the weight advantage of Medford began to tell, and while the locals never stopped fighting, it was an uphill game for them. To single out one Ashland player over the other for special mention would be somewhat unfair as every member of the team earned the commendation of all lovers of the sport. However, Dick Hitchcock, in his first appearance as a punter, out kicked his opponents, and made many yards by the effectiveness of his toe, while Sonny Leedom, that diminutive left half back, who seemed to be able to gain at will through the heavy line, carved for themselves a well earned rlace in the archives of Ashland football history.
