

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

A particularly bright boy of 12 years is one of the "shut-ins" whom Miss Vera Beard looks forward to visiting on her rounds of public health nursing. He is expecting her long before it is humanly possible for her to fit in a visit with him along with school inspections, maternity work, clinics, etc., but she is thinking about him and trying to solve his problem long before she arrives at his home. After turning off the highway and driving 18 miles toward Mt. Pitt she has plenty of time to think of all the cheerful news she knows a live-wire boy would like to hear, but she must also remember that her visit must not make him restless and long to take part in the football game she wants to tell him about. Miss Beard's patient has tuberculosis of the spine or perhaps it is cured from having been in a cast for a year and given complete rest until this past summer when he was released and allowed to walk across the room. For the past few months he has lacerated a day in bed with a few steps the next day and has been counting on beginning the new year with going to school and playing in the snow. His mother knows that his schooling will be postponed even later than that. Miss Beard and Dr. Geary do all they can but are worried about one of the boy's knees that is becoming inflamed and wish they had met this boy in a clinic when he was many years younger. If they can not save this boy they hope to save every other child in the county from developing tuberculosis of the bones, of the lungs, or any other sickness for that matter. This boy is receiving good care in his own home with his mother following instructions carefully to guard the others from catching this dread disease, but the big mistake was made three years ago when a quack doctor tried to cure the sore spine with irritating "electric rubs" until the child developed a fever each afternoon and became too weak for further treatments. Later the family moved west settling in their present location and after a long time, too long, in fact, they were put in touch with the County Health Unit which promptly adopted them. To reach invalids like this as well as the healthy children, the Jackson County Public Health Association recently put into 75 schools the essay contest, having as its subject, "Why We Should Buy Christmas Seals." The interest of the children became thoroughly aroused as they realized that the seals help pay for clinics all over the county, milk and medical supplies for the sick and innumerable items to keep people well. Essays are pouring into headquarters since the contest closed last Friday and as soon as possible the judges will award the prizes. A French newspaper says Uncle Sam's dollars have blinded him. We don't know which is worse, to be blind or to lose your memory.

ORIGINAL STORY BY THE THIRD GRADE WHY THE TURKEY DOESN'T LIKE THANKSGIVING This story is about a big fat turkey whose name was Patty Legs. The farmer thought he was young and fat so would make a fine Thanksgiving dinner. Even if Patty Legs was young and fat he had quick wits.

Patty Legs thought of a plan, it was to run down the road and hide in the woods. He found a hollow log and stayed there over Thanksgiving. The next morning the farmer went into the barnyard and great was his surprise to find the turkey missing. The day after Thanksgiving Patty Legs came happily back home and then the farmer knew
