CRATER LAKE IN THE WINTER TIME

The ice we let it stay. The road to Heaven hasn't a thing on that climb over the Watchmen. As we went over the shoulder of the mountain the wind was head on, at times it blew us backward and we would have to fall down to keep from being brown over the cliff. After we got down off the mountain the wind wasn't so bad but we kept breaking through the crust ever few steps we would have to stop and rest. About a mile from the lodge the ranger with me began to cry. I couldn't figure out just why he was crying.

ing, whether he was afraid he wouldn't make it, or that he would, you see he was a married man, his wife was waiting for him and we had stayed a day longer than we had expected. When we got to the lodge we had to wash our hands and face in snow until the blood started. It was one of the hardest things I ever did. There was a warm fire just inside the door and there we were out there in the wind and storm trying to thaw out. The door opened and there stood Supt. Sparrow. Somehow you forgot all the hardships of the hours before in just knowing that you were backed up one hundred percent by a man like him. He had come all the way from Medford to see us through."

The entry ended by saying, "I'm tired out." There were seven cars at the rim today. I am still working on the batteries, have them all out and taken apart. Clear today, there was a bite in the southwest wind. Temp. H. 51. L. 41.4, R. 10, M. 46.

Out of the everywhere
Where do they come from ... gloves with a fawn-soft texture, exotic perfumes, fine spun silks, combs of amber, cool stretched linens, lamp-shades of parchment, slippers with buckles ready to blaze? How are they brought into one show—how gathered into one home—how enjoyed by one person? A simple turning through the advertising pages of magazines or newspaper is the answer. Advertisements summon them into the here.
Advertisements give you intimate, stories of new things. That's news. They tell all the amazing truths of a good thing. That's honesty. They arouse the desire that brings it closer, inform you where you can find it, advise how much it's worth to you. That's service. And when you enter the shop to choose, and choose the value you are sure of because it's advertised, the value that means the most to you because you compare the advertised truths ... that's economy.
Read the advertisements. They give you wisdom when you buy
