1,208 Feet High

A building corporation in New York is to erect an office building 1,208 feet high. If the Washington monument were to be set atop the great pyramid of Gizeh the combined height would fall short by 200 feet of reaching the top of this projected structure. It would be necessary to pile the Bunker Hill monument on the combination to reach an altitude which would permit one to look over the top of it.

In a valley of the Himalayas this building wouldn't look very tall, but set down among the Ozarks it would overtop some of the minor knobs and come almost within half their height of rivaling the tallest peaks. On Manhattan island, which already supports the greatest aggregation of tall buildings in the world, it will stick up like a monolith—until somebody overshadows it with a taller one. The rearing of this structure will also enable the native Gothamite to hold up his head again. Naturally boastful of the bigness of his town and everything pertaining to it he had to suffer the humiliation of letting the upstart Detroit get away with the highest office building in Christendom. But now he can swagger once more for he will soon have a structural prodigy that will rise nearly 300 feet above the Book tower of Henry Ford's town.

The Cancer Reward

William Lawrence Saunders of New York has hung up a reward of $100,000 for cancer research scientists. Half is to be given for discovery of the cause of cancer and half for discovery of a proved cure.

This is very handsome and generous of Mr. Saunders, but it is unlikely to have any effect whatever either toward stimulating research or producing the discoveries which he wishes to reward. These discoveries, if they are ever made, will belong in the category of things that cannot be bought and paid for. The winner or winners will be successful because of their insatiable thirst to know, not because of any hope of financial reward.

This is not saying that there is anything immoral in offering the reward or unethical in its acceptance, in the event it is earned. If anybody earns the right to financial endowment which will forever remove from him the possibility of worry over a livelihood it is the patient and painstaking delver into the causes and cures of the malignant plagues which afflict the bodies of men. The bestowers of such rewards are entitled to full credit for taking it upon themselves to discharge the debt which the public owes, but they can hardly claim any share, even as instigators, in the achievement.

Useless Investigations

Now two or three congressmen have become greatly concerned over the charges involving Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker in "sloughing" baseball games. And as might reasonably be expected, they have suggested a congressional investigation of the whole affair.

Congress of late is doing a great many things that the framers of the Constitution did not propose congress should do. Senators and representatives are doing everything but the things they are elected to do. They seem to be a bunch of busy-bodies, meddling where they have no right to meddle.

Members of both houses seem to take a great delight in holding investigations of one kind or another, none of which has availed their constituencies anything.

READ IN THE ADS

I've kept that school girl complexion I've walked a mile for a smoke, I've asked the man who owns one And he tells me it keeps him broke. I know that a child can play it, To guard the danger line I try, I know when it's time to retire. And I've heard that they satisfy. But there's one thing that keeps me guessing, No matter how hard I strive; I'd like to know just whether or not I'm one of the four out of five—Exchange.

A "singing tailor" has been discovered in Gotham who has a good chance of appearing in opera. He ought to do well as the heroine's suitor.

Some organizations, like some individuals, seem to enjoy themselves most when they are stirring up trouble for somebody else.

Isn't It Odd?

NEW YORK — The price of bread reached pre-war levels when a large chain grocery placed a 22 ounce loaf on sale at eight cents.

ATLANTIC CITY — As he completed the marriage ceremony Recorder Corio handed Miss Eleanor J. Connell a black jack "to be used," he explained. "When the bridegroom starts going out at night," Ernest H. Sambas, the bridegroom, is a municipal employee and a friend of the recorder.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Florence Ameres, who was fined 100 for shoplifting, is convinced the devil lurks in department stores. She told Justice Diets in general sessions, that the devil whispered in her ear as she was shopping in Cimbels and tempted her to steal.

NEW YORK — When business and art clash, business better take care. A realty firm evicted Albert Lopez, an artist, from his studio, and it is charged, damaged some of his paintings. When Lopez protested the realty man said his paintings should be sold by the "five and ten cent stores." Lopez sued and was awarded $3,000 by a jury Monday for damage to his paintings and feelings.

Nature has decreed that Salem shall be the world's greatest pear industry center. This will come soon or late, because this is the pear paradise. Crater Lake In Winter Time

BY JOHN MABIN, Caretaker at Crater Lake Lodge

Saturday, November 20, 1926
Things are not always what they seem, or something like that. Some days ago I put the bears to sleep, at least on paper. When I looked out this morning I saw some big dents in the snow. I thought at first they were holes left by some of those big snowflakes that I told you of last night, but they turned out to be bear tracks. I went out and followed them and I saw where he had hammered on the windows trying to waken me. Evidently he became angry for he pulled the screen off the window and tore it in a dozen pieces. He found some feed that I had set out for the Knights. When I found out that he had found something to eat I knew that he would be back tonight. Sure enough about dark I saw him coming across the lower end of the flat. He didn't seem to like the snow as he was going from one tree to the other to avoid it. I gathered up the scraps that I had been saving and went out. It was Old Fritz. Can you beat it? I fixed the bed up again in the basement and put some more food there and here is hoping that he gets up nerve enough to go in. I could coax him in in the day time but he would tear the house down getting out, if he finds it will be O. K.
