them. They successfully reached Boston, Mass., but there Larry Collapsed and despite Boston's most expert medical attention, passed away five days later.

After communicating with the doctor, "Happy" worked three weeks as a dish washer, to pay the funeral expenses of his dead pal, and continued on his way alone, this time with a shiny new pair of "bracelets" on his own wrists. He took oath before Mayor Nicholas, of Boston, that he would never attempt to remove the cuffs but to insure against their removal, they are sealed and welded upon him. They are for the purpose of making him easily recognizable wherever he may go.

"No," he replied, "hiking is very little fun. You must face all sorts of weather and people with a smile and it's pretty tough at times. To make my expenses I write for the newspapers and sell a little souvenir of myself. All my hotel accommodations are complimentary through the courtesy of the hotel managers and that helps a lot. at 120 degrees or through ankle-deep mud and ponder on the source of your forth-coming meal. If you think its fun, try it."

From here he goes north to Vancouver and says he expects to reach his home some time in August. But no longer on foot. When "Happy" arrived in Ashland he received a bicycle from the city of Chico, Cal. It is waiting for him here at present and was ordered for him by the people of Chico in admiration of his courage.

And so he plods on, seldom stopping, seldom resting, yet always with the smile on his face that has earned him the name of "Happy."

During his stay in this city "Happy" is the guest of the Lithia Springs Hotel.

parish, where the storm struck first at sunset Thursday. The family of Oscar Ashby was almost completely wiped out. Mrs. Ashby and five young children were buried in the wreckage of their home or torn from the house and battered against trees. The mother's body was found in a tree top wrapped in wire. One of the little boys saved his own life by running from the house and throwing himself flat on the ground, but he was blinded in both eyes by flying debris.

Two other Ashby children were severely injured. One has a fractured skull and is not expected to recover. Ashby and his oldest son were away from home when the storm struck and were not hurt.
