THE BLESSED

He who loves the sun-rise
And the sun set's amber rays
He who listens to the wind
And walks in twilight ways,
He who reverences the hills
The trees, the roots, the sod
Hears the pulse of the infinite
Hand in hand with God.

JOSEPH

Opera in three acts by Etienné Nicolas Mehul
Text After Duval

Joseph, the son of Jacob, who was sold by his brothers, has by his wisdom saved Egypt from threatening famine; he resides as governor in Memphis under the name of Cleophas. But though much honored by the King and all the people, he never ceases to long for his old father, whose favorite child he was.

Driven from Palestine by famine, Jacob's sons are sent to Egypt to ask for food and hospitality. They are tormented by pangs of conscience, which Simeon is hardly able to conceal, when they are received by the governor, who at once recognizes them. Seeing their sorrow and repentance, he pities them, and promises to treat them with all hospitality.

He does not reveal himself, but goes to meet his youngest brother, Benjamin, and his blind father, who mourning for his lost son has not been diminished by the long years. Joseph induces his father and brother to partake of the honors which the people render to him.

The whole family is received in the governor's palace, where Simeon, consumed by grief and conscience-stricken, at last confesses to his father the selling of Joseph. Full of horror, Jacob curses and disowns his ten sons. But Joseph intervenes. Making himself known, he grants full pardon and entreats his father to do the same. The old man yields, and together they praise God's providence and omnipotence.

David Belasco, the Dean of the American Theatre writes:

"The voice is to the actor what the chisel is to the sculptor. He must beware of dulling its qualities. Naturally I am vitally concerned about the voices of my players, so I always advise the one cigarette that I discovered many years ago that does not impair control of the subtlest vocal shadings or cause huskiness or harshness. I mean the 'Lucky Strike.' It is the player's best friend."

David Belasco

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

Wild Horses Are To Be Killed Off

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 11.—Wild as the wolves that roam the hills and plains, the scrubby, worthless wild horses of British Columbia face extermination.

A drive which started this month, authorized and partially financed by the government, to clear the interior ranges of worthless stock, already has mowed down several hundred head.

Operations are being conducted in several districts. All stallions caught will be killed, although they may be splendid specimens of horseflesh. They do a great deal of damage by enticing away valuable domesticated mares.

Many of the wild horses which, by the way, are not mustangs, are crippled and are just eating feed that should be available for cattle, it is held.

Nevada History is Written in Gold

RENO, Nev.,—Although the present gold rush at Weepah threatens to eclipse Nevada's booms of the past, it is no new experience in this state whose history is written largely in veins of ore.

Since the first pioneers pushed over the plains, seeking their fortunes in the West, Nevada has been known as a region rich in mineral resources. The first discovery of gold in this state was in 1849, at about the time the rush was started to California. Early histories tell of a gold strike in Gold Canyon, near Dayton, but the find was not of sufficient importance to divert the streams of travelers who were hurrying to California.

The first real strike, which brought adventurers from all over the world, was in western Nevada near what is known now as Virginia City. It was the famous Comstock Lode, and through it those four dominant figures of the California, gold days, Fair, Flood, Mackay and O'Brien—grew to power and riches.

The Comstock Lode was uncovered in 1873 and ran Nevada's annual mineral output up to $25,000,000. Machinery was not used in gold mining in those days, and men, women and children worked with their hands in wresting gold from the earth.

Silver gradually came into prominence and new millions in this metal were uncovered.

Then, in 1900, came the boom that started the town of Tonopah. The town grew rapidly, and in 1904 it was a bustling town of 4000 persons. In the first years of the new century gold rushes were started in Emerald county and Goldfield swung into being.

When machinery was brought into use gold and silver previously overlooked were found in quantities that swelled the Nevada production to new high totals.

Klamath Falls — Steam baths costing $10,000 will utilize local hot water flow.
