HOME CAMPERS TO BE SOUGHT

Lithia Park Will Be Open To Rogue River Valley Folks This Year

Planning to utilize the near 22 acres of land in the upper end of Lithia Park, the McCormick tract recently presented to the city by trustees of the Root estate, Ashland will bid for popularity as a vacation ground for Rogue River Valley folks, Frank Jordan, park superintendent said today.
"Ashland has every inducement to bring the Valley folks to this city for a vacation, and now that we have plenty of room in the park we are planning to throw it open to home campers," Mr. Jordan said.
Ashland Creek is to be dammed for swimming purposes. There is plenty of woodland and a more ideal spot for camping could not be conceived, according to the park superintendent.
Lack of space has in the past made it necessary to close the park to home campers.
Cost of the proposed improvement will not be great, most of the work to be done by the park crew.

IDEAL WEATHER, IDEAL SETTING, BIG CROWD FOR SPRING FESTIVAL

Neath starlit skies, in a setting which would have brought 50 to the heart of the most ardent, the 1927 Southern Oregon Normal school Spring Festival, which is hoped will become an annual in- stitution in Ashland, was presented Saturday night.

The night could not have been more ideal for the presentation, nor could the setting have been more perfect.
The program was enjoyed by a crowd estimated at between 1,000 and 1,200—a number far in excess of that expected. From Medford and other points throughout the Rogue River Valley, visitors were in town to see the presentation.
The dancers interpreted their work with a harmony and grace of motion, which made the huge crowd forgetful of reality. Days of hard work under the direction of Miss Virginia Hale, were evident, and took them to the lands of imagination and dreams. The costumes were colorful and fanciful, their designing by Miss Marlon Ady, head of the art department of the school, an example of her splendid work. Under the direction of Miss Leona Marsters, head of the music department of the college, the symbolic music was presented by a choir of voices from the band stand. The effect was altogether pleasing.
Efficient work of police and traffic officers and Lithians made the handling of traffic a simple matter. Some seats were provided but many carried blankets and were seated on the ground during

DEFENSE AND STATE ARGUE IN HIGH CASE

Judge Thomas Warns Coun- sel Against Too Much Argument—Identification Of Exhibits Bitterly At- tacked—Much Testimony Introduced Today By Pro- secution

Fred Smith, defense lawyer for Hugh D'Autremont, today tried to pin the prosecution down to the exact date when the D'Autremont brothers are alleged to have entered into a conspiracy to dynamite the S. P. train. Judge Thomas overruled the motion, asking a limitation on evidence in this way.
The state attorneys this morning, after a wrangle with the defense attorneys, stated they are going to prove that after graduating from a New Mexico high school, Hugh D'Autremont knowing and willingly came to Oregon to enter into a conspiracy with his two brothers in the holdup and wrecking of the S. P. train in the Siskiyou tunnel.
The tilts between the defense and state attorneys this morning became so acrimonious and so frequent that Judge Thomas admonished them against too much argument.
Testimony Given
The proceedings today were devoted mainly to testimony to identify the various exhibits which the state has introduced. In the cross-examination, the defense attorneys bitterly attacked each of the identifications, much of which was that articles "looked like the ones" they saw near the scene of the wreck in the mountains.
L. R. C. Geers, Oakland, California, repeated testimony he had given in 1926 previous to the description the findings of the tunnel and in connection with other details. In refutation of the doubt at the time of the wreck as to whether the body found blown to pieces in the mail car, was Dougherty, Geers said the face was easily identified as that of Dougherty.
Geers testified the tunnel was filled with smoke and steam when he looked through and could barely see some men working, whom he supposed were trainmen. Attorney Collier tried to bring out positively that the men were trainmen.
