Road Courtesy

If every automobile driver would practice just a little more "living-room" courtesy, there would be much fewer accidents, due to carelessness and recklessness.

It is a strange fact that while practically every driver on the road today would show unfailing courtesy and deference to a stranger in his own home, these same drivers glare, mutter and even shout at passing drivers who have thoughtlessly vexed them.

Many of the commotions of the road that result in accident might be prevented if these discourteous drivers would simply be a little more thoughtful.

Will Rogers recently commented that there were a lot of drivers who would race the twentieth century in order to cross the track and buy a frankfurter, which is a good example of foolish driving.

Value of Golf Course

Does Ashland realize the great value of the golf course which is gradually being constructed and improved near this city? We are afraid the large majority of our citizens do not, for the membership list is not increasing with anything like the rapidity which it should.

A visitor at Klamath Falls, which started a year earlier than Ashland did on a golf course, reports that 200 or more visitors played on the course there during June. Ashland's golf course is located such that it will attract a large number of tourists, who more frequently than before carry their golf equipment with them, when the course is completed.

Think of the value of having several hundred visitors each month enjoying recreation furnished by Ashland interests—and paying for this privilege! Isn't it worth a membership to help enable the club to make the local golf club as good as any in the region?

Recreation Nights

The Daily Tidings has been regretting the fact that we would not have the usual summer band concerts, which have always been the inspiration for a community gathering, but the announcement that a "recreation night" is being planned when it is hoped everybody will gather in the park for the program will to a certain extent replace the concert.

Community singing and stunts wherein many persons join are conducive to a better understanding of each other and it would be well for everybody to assist in making these events a success.

Ashland is indebted to the Southern Oregon Normal school for this novel idea, as well as other programs which members of the normal school faculty have sponsored.

Another Problem

Penniless southerners, driven from the Mississippi valley by the recent floods, are on their way to Oregon, according to reports brought by tourists. They have heard that Oregon is the land of plenty and between five and ten thousand of them are said to be en route, expecting to find work in the Willamette valley and in the harvest fields of eastern Oregon. We have subscribed in excess of the allotted quota for the relief of these Mississippi sufferers, but we may be called upon to contribute for the support or maintenance of these thousands, who are probably doomed to disappointment. There is plenty of surplus labor in Oregon, and the unfortunate people who are without money and who are beating their way across the continent will be elephants on our hands, but they cannot be allowed to starve. They will become a serious problem upon arrival.—Oregon City Enterprise.

Flaming youth steals an automobile and wrecks it, three are dead and more may die. There are homes saddened and parents mourn. But what might have been the counter attractions placed before those young people in their homes? Was flaming youth altogether to blame.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Flock of Yreka came over Sunday morning to get cherries for canning. They returned to their home Sunday night well loaded with the delicious fruit, which grows so superbly in this valley.

The dance at the Junction last Friday night was another Nell Creek success. We want to congratulate the women who have had the pep and spirit to carry on with this program, which has consisted of an old fashioned dance every two weeks, and which they started in the spring, to pay for their plans. It is nearly accomplished, and we are all glad for them, and proud of their success.

Mrs. Beattie Hibbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus King, is visiting her parents for a few weeks, at the family home in Bellevue.

Mrs. Susanne Carter was visiting in this vicinity Wednesday. The burning of the needle-grass, fox tail, and weeds about the golf course Thursday evening proved a thriller for many spectators. It seemed for a time as though the workers were not going to keep the fire under control and were still busy fighting at ten o'clock. The morning however, showed little damage done, and a well burned off area, along the edges, makes golfing more of a pleasure.

A delightful dancing party was held at the White Star Station at Pinehurst last Saturday night, July 9, by the residents of that district. A splendid time was reported and a number of invited guests from Bellevue who did not find it possible to attend were the losers.

Mrs. Ruth Hamaker of Klamath Falls visited at the home of her sister, Mrs. Archie Kincaid of Emigrant creek last week.

Mrs. B. K. Barnes, who was convalescing in Ashland for some time, is much better and at her home again.

KLAMATH MAN HELD IN JAIL

Charged With Reckless Driving, W. A. McCutcheon Arrested

W. A. McCutcheon, Klamath Falls is held in the city jail, unable to furnish a $200 bond under which he was placed by Justice of the peace L. A. Roberts Saturday morning, when he pleaded not guilty to a charge of reckless driving.

The charge against McCutcheon is the outgrowth of an auto accident which occurred about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon on the Klamath highway, near the White Star service station. It is reported a car McCutcheon drove, his Ford coupe on the wrong side of the road and collided with a Dodge coupe driven by H. A. Bensch of Bakerfield, Cal. A fence was torn off the Dodge and one wheel was damaged. The Ford was also quite badly damaged. McCutcheon was placed under arrest by Chief of Police George McNabb.

SENTIMENTAL WIND
 (Louis Undermyer)
 The wind among the trees
 Is like no other wind.
 Our birches, small and silver-skinned,
 Maples and poplars—all of these Translate in every rising note his little differences.

Contentment or despair?
 And is the grief his own?
 The water words remain unknown
 Though every leaf reveals his snare.

Of promising portentous things that end in thinning air.
 Or has he chanced to find
 Something we may have left behind
 And quite forgotten on the way,
 Which he alone remembers but has never learned to say.

Important Books Reviewed—
 "Yvonne of Brathwaite, A Romance of the Mississippi Delta," by Marie Bankhead Owen. In an old-fashioned way it has a colored frontispiece of a fine southern gentleman of the fifties, in Prince Albert and stock, mounted on his riding horse. The author was a daughter of the great Southern Congressman Bankhead. It is, strictly speaking, a farm story.

Life and work on the farm, picturing its great worth, its partnership with sky and earth, with the sun and the rain, "and no man loses by his gain." What is richer in association than an old southern plantation home? The entire novel is rich in psycho-analysis but not of the diseased kind. There is a health sex interest of the normal sort, uncontaminated by Freudism and Flap-jackism.

In its faithful record of the old days this novel is a type of paternalism, both in the home and the government. It is printed on good paper and in fine large type.

Mrs. Gertrude and Helene Blode Euterich—
 Mrs. Gertrude and Helene Blode were hostesses last evening, Friday, July 15, when they entertained in their home on Nob Hill, in honor of their house guest, Mrs. George Salt of Cleveland, Ohio, a former resident of Ashland.

The time was spent playing cards, Mrs. George Coffey winning the first prize and Mrs. George Salt receiving consolation. At a late hour the hostesses served elaborate refreshments at a table beautifully decorated, the entire scheme being pink.

Those who received the "de-lightful hospitality of the Misses Blode were Mesdames Dan Kay, C. E. Beale and H. C. Stock, Misses Gladys Applegate, Emma Jenkins, Ethel Shrum, Calla Beale, Elsie Alexander and George Coffey, the guest of honor.

Camp Tula Hiltel Boy Scout Dinner—
 The Camp Tula Hiltel group of the Ashland Camp Fire Girls met Thursday afternoon, July 14, at the home of their guardian, Miss Edna L. Goben on Palm Avenue, where they were served a most delicious dinner by Misses May Cary and Jeannette Stearns, who cooked and served the meal as one of the requirements of Firemaker.

The girls present were the following named: Misses Maxine Gearhart, Gladys Hanson, Marion Hitchcock, Elaine Flackus, Carol Clark, Mae Cary, Jeannette Stearns, June Atkins, Lucille Anderson of Eugene, Oregon, who is visiting in Ashland with Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Shuts on Third street and Miss Marion Hitchcock on Oak street, and the guardian, Miss Edna L. Goben.

Interesting Affair At Hardy Home—
 One of the interesting affairs of this week was the Bridge party given last evening, Friday, July 15, by Mrs. P. R. Hardy at her beautiful home on North Main street.

Three tables were in play during the evening. Mrs. Domino Provost held high score, for which she received an attractive prize, and Mrs. A. J. McCallen was awarded the consolation. During a pleasant hour of conversation, the hostess served refreshments.

Mrs. Hardy's guests were Mesdames Domino Provost, A. J. McCallen, Harry Tomlinson, J. A. McGee, C. J. Read, H. L. Claycomb, Gerald Wenner, John Enders, Henry Enders, Jr., C. A. Haines, Earl Crow and R. L. Burdick, Jr.

Hedda Hoyt Talks Sport Frocks—
 NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—
 The importance of sportswear for women is demonstrated at all smart resorts this season. Frivolous frocks have no prestige whatever at beaches or country resorts and it is quite usual to find the well-dressed woman dressed in a simple sweater and skirt during afternoon as well as morning hours.

Sweaters are the outstanding style notes of the summer season. While many women feel that the sweater is both unbecoming and uncomfortable, the lightweight models and loose-fitting lines of this year's models makes them adaptable for any figure. Light-weight cashmere, sepi, silk, wool mixtures or soft knitted string are used instead of heavier yarns. Many models have open-work designs in them to permit the air to penetrate to the body.

While many horizontally striped sweaters are shown this year, the woman of importance prefers models of beige, white or plain pastel tones. Beige is of extreme importance in sports wear at present and this shade is often combined with white. For instance, the pleated skirt, shoes and long flannel coat may be white, while the sweater, hat and hose are in beige tones. Very pale pink is also favored for sweaters. Occasionally pink is embellished with metallic touches although metallic threads are inclined to tarnish at ocean resorts due to the dampness.

Neck lines of sweaters may be square, round or V-shaped and both neck lines and cuffs are usually outlined in a deeper shade than the sweater or in contrasting color. Narrow leather belts are generally worn at a low waist line on the sweater, the belt harmonizing with the skirt in most instances.
