SUMMER TARTS

Each country has a special pastry which is different from that of other countries. Sometimes it is named for the country in which it originated and sometimes it isn't. We commonly hear of the French, the Danish, the Italian and the Oriental Pastry. They are not made daily by the housewife, but served as a treat—usually when guests are present.

Puff paste is very popular at the present time, but it seems to be a difficult product for all housewives to make. Some very desirable products can be made from puff paste. It requires much time in preparation and should not be attempted unless the proper amount of time can be given the process.

Puff paste contains fat, flour, salt and water—the same ingredients that are found in plain pie paste. But in the making of puff paste a higher percent of fat is used. The flakiness of the pastry depends upon the way the fat is folded into the paste. It is said that a perfect puff paste consists of one hundred and ninety-seven layers of shortening and one hundred and ninety-eight layers of dough. This puff paste may be kept for several days if it is wrapped in waxed paper and kept in a cold place. It should not come in direct contact with the ice because that will create a wet surface.

Shells made from this paste may be used for creamed meats or vegetables. Fresh fruits or jam may be made into a delightful filling for them. Try adding a jam such as raspberry to whipped cream for a filling.

If you do not care to take the time required by the puff paste, make a real-rich pie paste. The amount of fat used varies, some like it best with three parts of flour, some like it best with four parts of flour to one of fat. In order to make this pastry real flaky, add about one-half teacup of flour. You will be surprised at the flakiness of the pastry. One point which should be remembered in the making of pastry, is that just enough water should be added so that the other ingredients can be held together. If too much water is added the crust will be tough regardless of the amount of shortening used.

This paste can be baked on little pastry pans or it can be baked on the bottom of muffin tins. The individual pans can be handled more easily but the muffin tins are quite satisfactory.

HOOVER AS PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE IS DISCUSSED

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover's rise to the forefront of American politics and some of his qualifications for the presidency are discussed in an article by Silas Bent, special writer, appearing in Scribner's magazine for September, on the book stands today.

Hoover's ups and downs, even preceding the time that he was discussed seriously for the presidency in 1920, to the present day when he is prominently mentioned as a possible successor to President Coolidge, are given in detail. Speaking of his entrance into politics in 1920 Bent says: "He was so little politically minded that, having spent most of his manhood abroad, he did not know at the outset whether he was a democrat or a republican. He made no effort to conceal the fact that he would like to be president and finally he decided he would rather be a republican president."

Bent's article is entitled "Hoover, The Man For Difficult Jobs." It discusses how the commerce chief is not fitted physically or temperamentally for politics but points out that he is today discussed most as a possible Chief Executive.

An Alpine Cow Remarked, "Here's how My richest milk's improved"

The taste tells you there's cream in every drop

This canning scheme Gives twice the cream The water's half removed!

ITS unmistakable—the delicious, rich, creamy taste you get in Alpine.

That's why the finest soups, sauces and desserts are smoother and creamier when made with Alpine. That's why biscuits and cakes are lighter and finer. That's why the best cup of coffee tastes better still—with Alpine.

Into every pint of Alpine goes one quart of rigidly tested, full-cream milk—with nothing added—nothing taken away but water. And there's no cream line, no skim milk. Alpine has cream in every drop.

Yet for all its creamy goodness, Alpine costs less than ordinary milk. And it keeps indefinitely, for it is sealed in its air-tight container and sterilized. Always fresh—always pure. Get Alpine today.

A real treat with roast beef

Alpine Yorkshire Pudding—Sift 1 cup flour with 1/4 tsp. salt and 1 tsp. baking powder. Add gradually 1/2 cup Alpine Milk mixed with 1/4 cup water and 1 beaten egg. Cover very hot pan with fat from roast. Pour in 1/2 cup of mixture. Bake in hot oven 20 minutes, basting twice with drippings.
