URGES SALES TALK TO ADVERTISE HEAVEN
 WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis.—(AP)—Ministers as high-powered preachers, selling sub-divisions in heaven, is the soul-saving plan of the Rev. James M. Johnson, vicar of St. John's parish here. Dr. Johnson advocates the elimination of the "ponderous sermon and 90-cent word" from the evangelical campaign, especially in the rural districts. In their stead he would substitute the "sales talk," selling heaven to the people on its merits over another well known subdivision. Dr. Johnson would conduct the revival meeting after the fashion of a Rotary club "get-together," with the formal element eliminated in favor of the informal social features of the farm home. He declares this plan had been found highly successful in the rural districts of Kansas and Wisconsin where it had been put to the test.
