

VALLEY VIEW NOTES

The third of a series of all-day sewing meetings was held by the Valley View Community club at the club house last Tuesday. There has been a very good attendance at all the meetings, an excellent covered dish luncheon being served at noon each day by an appointed committee. Several new garments were made, and a number of garments made over. Several hats were made also, all of the sewing and millinery being under the supervision of Mrs. Florence York, home demonstration agent.

Among those from Valley View who attended the Who-Do class party at Mrs. H. J. Carter's home in Ashland last Thursday afternoon were Mrs. William Glenn, Mrs. J. R. McCracken and Mrs. James Lennox.

Paul Nichols is being employed by the California Oregon Power Co., helping in the construction of the new high powered line between Prospect and Coppo.

Mr. and Mrs. William Glenn were dinner guests last Sunday of Mrs. Harry Roe, Mr. M. F. Craig and Frank Craig.

Several from Valley View spent the week end over in Klamath county duck hunting. Among those who enjoyed the hunt were A. H. Davenport, Carl Glasgow, Bob Wagner, Earl and Everett Bostwick.

Mrs. Mabel Reichert and Mrs. Mary Brown of Ashland attended the sewing meeting of the club last Tuesday. The club members are always glad to have them out as they are still counted as home folks.

J. R. McCracken left for Portland last Saturday morning to attend the Pacific International Livestock Exposition. He made the trip north with Mr. Laughlin of Central Point.

Mr. McCracken expects to be gone about a week and during that time, besides attending the Livestock show, he will visit friends at Shedd and Beaverton and will visit his niece, Mrs. Kenneth Lansing of Portland. Donald Stansell, who had his hands very badly cut, accidentally

SPORTSMATTER

A great ball player and a gallant gentleman was lost to the game and to his fellows when Ross Young died in San Antonio ten days ago.

Tributes to the former Giant outfielder have come from every part of the United States where his baseball ability and his sportsmanship were known and admired.

"Young was one of the finest players I ever had on my club," said John J. McGraw. "He was a natural hitter and fielder.

"In every way his life was clean and he worked conscientiously for the best interests of the Giants. Neither on nor off the field did I ever have occasion to find fault with him and his death is one of the saddest incidents I can recall."

"Pep" Young long was recognized as one of the best right fielders and hustling ball players ever known in the major leagues. He was a "ball players' player," which means that his team-mates recognized his greatness.

After graduating from a Texas military academy, Young turned pro and went to the New York Giants in 1917, afterwards being sent to Rochester for seasoning. "Pep" was a member of the pennant-winning New York teams of 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

In the summer of 1926, stomach trouble forced the great outfielder to return to his Texas home, and Bright's Disease developed. He never recovered, although he made a gallant fight and kept his courage and cheerfulness to the end.

Baseball can do with more players of "Pep" Young's type.

The Giants need an outfielder of Young's caliber, at least two more good, young pitchers and a catcher, if they are to come through to the top of the National League in 1928.

Certainly, of the five clubs which will be very much in the running next season, the Giants have the best infield.

Bill Terry is getting to be just about the best first baseman in the league, the best in baseball, perhaps, after Lou Gehrig of the Yankees. When they make more useful, all-around second baseman than Rogers Hornsby, he will be both of them. And Travis Jackson is as good a shortstop as there is in the game. Even with a nibbled vertebrae, Freddy Lindstrom can play third base so well that John McGraw exclaimed recently:

"I wouldn't trade Freddy for 'Kiki' Cuyler, even with a bad back."

All of which is very encouraging to Giant fans. But there must be battery strength and the Giants haven't got it at the moment.

Next year's National League race should be a pipkin. The Reds probably will start earlier and avoid the detour into the cellar which spoiled their chances this year. The Cardinals will have Tommy Thevenow back at shortstop and will be just so much more dangerous. The Pirates should be no worse, and the Cubs have every reason to expect a higher rating than they received after their disastrous 1927 slump.

All of which promises a most enjoyable season for National Leaguemen. But who's going to stop the Yankees in the American League?

ly at the Junior high school last Wednesday, is doing as well as can be expected, but it will be some time before he will be able to use his right hand. George Lowe, who is a student at the University of Oregon, came home last week and to visit

"Electricity brings increased comfort"

Says Herbert Hoover, Secretary U. S. Department of Commerce

"We are in the midst of a great transformation in the development of electric power—it is reducing the burden of human toil; it is increasing productivity; it is bringing increased comfort to our people."

WHAT each workman in the United States can do with his hands is multiplied ten times by the electric power he uses. Sixty-eight million people are also using labor-saving electrical devices in their homes.

Electrical service has its greatest value because it is delivered at the time and place where it is needed. That is what electrical service means, and the foresight and enterprise of the country's light and power companies have helped make it possible.

Because power companies built power plants and transmission lines that would take care of the growing demand for service many years in advance, every new electrical invention has found an abundance of power ready to serve it. Now even the small communities get electrical service through interconnected power systems.

Enthusiastic public acceptance has done much to help build this electrical service. Three million investors own the securities of electric power companies and the whole public has benefited from rate reductions made possible through increased use of labor saving devices.

To insure the complete fulfillment of the promise of comfort and happiness which electricity offers, the American principle of individual initiative must be maintained.

his family also to play on the Frosh team from the University, when they played Ashland high last Saturday. He returned to Eugene on Sunday, going that far with Mr. and Mrs. Don Lowe who went to Portland to attend the International Livestock Show. Mr. and Mrs. Don Lowe will visit for a short time in the north before returning to their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Glasgow Stratton and baby Betty, who have been making their home in Ashland lately, moved to Klamath Falls last week. Mr. Stratton is an S. P. employee and has a regular run now, between Klamath Falls and Gerber.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Leslie who have been absent for several weeks, returned last Monday. They had been called to Pennsylvania by the serious illness of Mr. Leslie's father.

W. F. DeFord was one of the Elks who attended the initiation and banquet at Montague, California last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wakefield of Martinez, Calif., arrived last Wednesday in Valley View to visit Mrs. Wakefield's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. DeFord. After visiting relatives here for a couple of days, Mr. and Mrs. Wakefield accompanied by Mrs. DeFord left Saturday for Portland, where they visited Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hughes and Elsie Lydia DeFord, also daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeFord. They also took in the International Livestock show, returning to Ashland last Tuesday.

Those from Valley View who attended the Eastern Star meeting in Ashland last Tuesday evening were: Mrs. D. H. Jackson, Mrs. Harry Roe, Mrs. May Stratton, Miss Jean Stratton and Mr. and Mrs. James Lennox.

Hollywood Notes

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The marriage will be held shortly in the movie colony during the coming season if the trek toward the beaches here at this time is an indication.

Following the elaborate Vilma Banky-Rod La Roque nuptials, Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg began their marital voyage at a ceremony marked by its simplicity.

Helena Costello, daughter of the famous Maurice, has made a trip to the altar, while Louise Fazenda, famed comedienne, a s.d. Hal Wallis, director of publicity of Warner Brothers have announced their engagement.

There will be the usual number of divorces of course to offset any heavy trend toward the domestic life. Billy Dove has created a new wait that threatens to become a sensation. She calls it "Louisiana." The movements originated while she watched Gilbert Roland fencing in their current production, she tells us.

Movieband Meanderings—Mary Brian on a merry-go-round—Pola Negri carrying stacks of dishes as a movie waitress—Richard Arlen practicing roping for his first Western. "Under the Tonto Rim"—Adolphe Menjou waving a conductor's baton—Noah Berry reading a financial
