

SOCIETY NOTES

DOBOOTHY REID, Editor. Phone 39 or 475-L

CALENDAR OF EVENTS

Saturday, Nov. 4.—The local Pan-Hellenic association will have a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock at the Lithia Springs hotel, after which all the members will attend the Normal school-Albany football game.

Sunday, Nov. 5.—Bible Day at both the Methodist Episcopal and the Christian churches.

Monday, Nov. 6.—The P. T. A. council will meet in the public library at 8:30 o'clock p. m.

Monday, Nov. 7.—The Queen Esther of the M. E. church will hold a meeting at the home of Miss Dorothy Yeo, 463 Allison street in the evening.

Monday, Nov. 7.—Members of the Nazarene church will hold all-day conference in church parlors. Basket dinner at noon in parlors. A number of visiting Nazarenes expected at the conference Monday.

Monday, Nov. 7.—The Neighbors of the Woodcraft will hold their regular meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall. Election of officers. All members requested to be present.

Monday, Nov. 7.—The Ashland Study club will meet at 2:30 o'clock p. m. at the home of M. E. A. Woods, 380 North Main. All members requested to be present.

Tuesday, Nov. 8.—Alpha Embroidery club of Alpha Chapter No. 1, O. E. S., will hold an all-day meeting at the Masonic hall, starting at 10 o'clock a. m. Covered-dish luncheon at noon. All members urged to be present.

Tuesday, Nov. 8.—The two groups of the local Delphians will meet. One at the home of Mrs. D. A. Peterson, 78 S. Pine, and the other with Mrs. J. M. Wagner, 123 Oak street. A full attendance is desired.

Wednesday, Nov. 9.—The Wednesday afternoon club of the Presbyterian church will meet at the home of Mrs. F. F. Whittle, 428 E. street. A full attendance is urged to be present. Hostesses, Mrs. Whittle and Mrs. August Schuurman.

Tuesday, Nov. 15.—Southern Oregon chapter of the State Music Teachers' association will meet at the Hotel Year. Luncheon at the Hotel Medford.

THE PEACOCK

Before her mirror Madame stands
And preens herself with artful hands;
She curves her eyebrows, smooths her hair
And sees herself a lady fair.
The glass reflects her plumage fine,
Her silken sheen, her jewel's shine,
Her glinting eyes, her haughty face,
Her figure posed with conscious grace.
A gorgeous thing with satin skin,
But with no trace of soul within.
May Macular Coggins,
Ashland

Among New Books—
"The Gypsy," by W. B. Trites,
Nice, France.

Published in France, in the French manner—paper back, thin French type, wide margins, coarse paper—this brief novel by an American novelist conveys the illusion of being a translation from the French or Spanish. The makers of the book is partly responsible for this—the florid and melodramatic style in which inferior writers of these countries indulge are responsible still more. One wonders what American publisher would have published this work.

An account of the downfall of

Girls Dance With Joy

when they use this new wonderful French Process Face Powder called MELLO-GLO—keeps that ugly shine away. Women rave over its superior purity and quality. Stays on longer—skin looks like a peach—keeps complexion youthful—prevents large pores. Get a box of MELLO-GLO Face Powder today. Litch's Pharmacy, East Side Pharmacy.

a weak character—one of those Tomlinson characters, capable of neither good nor ill. "The Gypsy" goes into unflattering detail about the physical and moral breakdown of an artist who "goes native." Briefly, the story is this: An artist, aged 50, accompanied by his devoted and loving wife, goes to Spain, sees and falls instantly in love with a beautiful gypsy. His wife encourages him to use the gypsy for a model, since his subsequent work is of a much greater artistic value. The gypsy makes up her mind to marry the artist; she and her people poison the faithful and devoted wife. Artist marries gypsy, takes to drink and narcotics to drown his remorse, and is finally himself poisoned by the gypsies, who fear he will tell of their first crime.

The style is not particularly effective, the plot is obvious and childish, and nothing much remains except the moral lesson, and persons on the lookout for moral lessons are unlikely to seek them in work such as this.

Let Us Celebrate The Home—
In this day of false scientists who prize of family complexes and inhibitions the Home has a come in for more than its share of reproach. It spreads a sheltering roof over a lot of sins of omission and commission that conceals makes us unwilling to carry on our own shoulders. Yet, one who has been brought up in an average American home is moved to wonder how in the atmosphere that prevails there such a foreign importation as an inhibition ever found a fitting chance.

Family life is a tolerably fair proving ground. Members of a family begin to exhibit pretty early and all the time the same characteristics. One meets with in the bigger world of society and business and the professions. To live successfully with one's family puts one in a fair way to live successfully with one's neighbors and business associates.

All fathers are not Odipus Rex. Nor all mothers cling vines stunting the growth of youthful shoots. Witness Mrs. Lindbergh. Several times in those eventful days of the stripping hero's Washington triumph she saw her son hesitate; and each time she let him make his own decision. All honor to her for it! Like a wise woman she knew when to withhold the maternal guiding hand; she was mother enough to believe in Youth, and, believing, to let Youth find and take its own course.

We believe that she is symbolic of a million mothers in America today, just as the son is typical of thousands more of the same breed in our colleges, high schools, playgrounds and nurseries. Your four-year-old riding his velocipede on the concrete sidewalk before your front door may seem to heighten suggested by you. The snub-nosed boy who tinkers with the radio set across the street may be an Edison in embryo.

Home is places where heroes are born. Let us thank God for them!—McCall's.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Randles Host and Hostess—
Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Randles were the gracious host and hostess Monday evening, October 31, when they entertained a group of friends with a card party at their pleasant home on Liberty street. The rooms of their home were attractively decorated with a Halloween color scheme of orange and black. Mr. Guy Randles held high score for which he received the first prize and Mr. Harry Moore was awarded the consolation.

At a late hour Mrs. Randles served delicious refreshments to the following named: Mr. and Mrs. James Shiffer, Mr. and Mrs. Ruy Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Randles, Mr. and Mrs. William Grenbomer and Mr. Merritt Randles.

W. C. T. U. "Tag" Day Tomorrow—
W. C. T. U. "Tag" Day will be observed in Ashland tomorrow, Saturday, November 5. A short time ago the members of the local

Happier Her-Can Class Party—
Members of the Berean class of the local Baptist church held a

Protect Your Busy Morning Hours with Sustaining Food—Get

QUICK QUAKER OATS

The Breakfast that "Stands By" You Cooks in 2 1/2 to 5 Minutes

Herbert's Grocery

19 E. MAIN PHONE 59

Home Grown Sorghum, 2 1/2 tin, 45c

New Sauerkraut, 3 lbs. .... 25c

1 LARGE BATH TOWEL FREE

With 10 bars Dona Castile Soap at 95c

Per Package . . . . . 9c

WE DELIVER

Johnson's Market

61 N. Main Free Delivery Phone 78

ASHLAND

enjoyable party yesterday afternoon, Thursday, November 3, at the home of Mrs. G. F. Carver, 273 Iowa street. Approximately twenty ladies were present. The hostess, Mrs. Mary Graham, helped her in entertaining, and Mrs. V. O. N. Smith and Mrs. Hunter assisted her in serving tasty refreshments during the afternoon. A beautiful table scheme of white and yellow was used, with white and yellow chrysanthemums intermingled with ivy forming the background.

A short business session was conducted, during which the following named officers were elected: president, Mrs. H. C. Hanson; vice-president, Mrs. Frank Bewick; and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. N. W. Heard. When the regular routine of business was finished, the ladies spent several hours making articles of fancy work for their bazaar which will be held sometime around Thanksgiving.

Yesterday's meeting was the last one that will be held until after the Christmas holidays.

Evening of Bridge at Peters Home—
The home of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Peters, Jr., on Iowa street was the scene of a most delightful affair last evening, Thursday, November 3, when they entertained a number of friends with an evening of bridge. A profusion of chrysanthemums and colorful autumn leaves were in evidence everywhere around the rooms of the Peters home, and this color scheme was also used for the tally cards.

Three tables were in play during the evening. Mrs. J. A. McGee held high score among the ladies, receiving a pretty little pottery basket as the prize, and Mrs. Gerald Wenner was awarded the consolation. Mr. Domingo Provost received a brass smoking set as the gentlemen's first prize and Mr. J. A. McGee was the gentleman-consulted. At midnight Mrs. Peters served fried chicken, salad, hot biscuits and coffee. Delightful place cards and napkins made an attractive decoration for the table.

The guest list included: Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Burdick, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wenner, Mr. and Mrs. Domingo Provost and Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Haines.

Out of Town Guests—
Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Malmgren of Phoenix will be out of town guests this evening, Friday, November 4, at a dinner party given by Miss Geppie Haan at her home on Palm avenue, the occasion being in honor of the birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. Flora Haan. Other guests will be Audrey and Clarence Haan and Miss Edna Goheen.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Randles Host and Hostess—
Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Randles were the gracious host and hostess Monday evening, October 31, when they entertained a group of friends with a card party at their pleasant home on Liberty street. The rooms of their home were attractively decorated with a Halloween color scheme of orange and black. Mr. Guy Randles held high score for which he received the first prize and Mr. Harry Moore was awarded the consolation.

At a late hour Mrs. Randles served delicious refreshments to the following named: Mr. and Mrs. James Shiffer, Mr. and Mrs. Ruy Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Randles, Mr. and Mrs. William Grenbomer and Mr. Merritt Randles.

W. C. T. U. "Tag" Day Tomorrow—
W. C. T. U. "Tag" Day will be observed in Ashland tomorrow, Saturday, November 5. A short time ago the members of the local

Happier Her-Can Class Party—
Members of the Berean class of the local Baptist church held a

Protect Your Busy Morning Hours with Sustaining Food—Get

QUICK QUAKER OATS

The Breakfast that "Stands By" You Cooks in 2 1/2 to 5 Minutes

Herbert's Grocery

19 E. MAIN PHONE 59

Home Grown Sorghum, 2 1/2 tin, 45c

New Sauerkraut, 3 lbs. .... 25c

1 LARGE BATH TOWEL FREE

With 10 bars Dona Castile Soap at 95c

Per Package . . . . . 9c

WE DELIVER

Johnson's Market

61 N. Main Free Delivery Phone 78

ASHLAND

Some Cooking Hints

A new fruit salad served at fashionable hotels is Maryland Ambrosia. It is made by mingling lobes of oranges, slices of bananas dice of Hawaiian sliced pineapple, of pineapple tid-bits, a few raisins, grapes, and a handful of nuts. The juice from these different fruits may be increased by the addition of sugar a short time before the dish is served. Have the ingredients ice-cold, and, just before sending them to the table, heap whipped cream on the top.

A perfect gelatin dessert should be transparent, brilliant and only stiff enough to hold its form, not solid. Here is the trick. Remember it takes proportionately less time and less gelatin in cold than in hot weather. Gelatin should soak in cold water and be dissolved over hot; never heated to the boiling point, as this renders it sticky. In general, two ounces of gelatin (the amount usually in every package) will jelly two quarts of liquid, but this must be proved by trial, not only of

are straight-lined, with occasionally, the front side-flare.

Among Lanvin's coats are many with deep fur facings from neck-line to hem. Such models usually have, bell-shaped fur cuffs which turn backwards at the wrist. No fur is used upon hemlines.

Although black coats are more frequent than colors, considerable beige and gray tweed models are shown. These are trimmed in matching fox, wolf or other long-haired pelts. New, as winter items, are coats of black a 1 1/2 moire, padded to give warmth. One attractive moire model has melon-shaped collar and sleeves of split mink tails. Paris has not the furs which we have in America and thus the frequent use of animal tails as trimming. Mink tails are split and applied closely together in horizontal effect upon the cloth collar and cuffs. The effect is quite lively. Some moire silk coats use wide revers of white or summer-dyed ermine. The black and white idea in coats also is depicted in fur in several of Lanvin's models.

Mme. Ganna Walzka chose such wraps while we were there. One was a short jacket of black broadtail trimmed with huge revers of white ermine and the other an evening cape combining black seal and white ermine in zig-zag effect.

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

HEDDA-HOYT TELLS OF FURS ON COATS

PARIS—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Some Cooking Hints

A new fruit salad served at fashionable hotels is Maryland Ambrosia. It is made by mingling lobes of oranges, slices of bananas dice of Hawaiian sliced pineapple, of pineapple tid-bits, a few raisins, grapes, and a handful of nuts. The juice from these different fruits may be increased by the addition of sugar a short time before the dish is served. Have the ingredients ice-cold, and, just before sending them to the table, heap whipped cream on the top.

A perfect gelatin dessert should be transparent, brilliant and only stiff enough to hold its form, not solid. Here is the trick. Remember it takes proportionately less time and less gelatin in cold than in hot weather. Gelatin should soak in cold water and be dissolved over hot; never heated to the boiling point, as this renders it sticky. In general, two ounces of gelatin (the amount usually in every package) will jelly two quarts of liquid, but this must be proved by trial, not only of

are straight-lined, with occasionally, the front side-flare.

Among Lanvin's coats are many with deep fur facings from neck-line to hem. Such models usually have, bell-shaped fur cuffs which turn backwards at the wrist. No fur is used upon hemlines.

Although black coats are more frequent than colors, considerable beige and gray tweed models are shown. These are trimmed in matching fox, wolf or other long-haired pelts. New, as winter items, are coats of black a 1 1/2 moire, padded to give warmth. One attractive moire model has melon-shaped collar and sleeves of split mink tails. Paris has not the furs which we have in America and thus the frequent use of animal tails as trimming. Mink tails are split and applied closely together in horizontal effect upon the cloth collar and cuffs. The effect is quite lively. Some moire silk coats use wide revers of white or summer-dyed ermine. The black and white idea in coats also is depicted in fur in several of Lanvin's models.

Mme. Ganna Walzka chose such wraps while we were there. One was a short jacket of black broadtail trimmed with huge revers of white ermine and the other an evening cape combining black seal and white ermine in zig-zag effect.

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

No Eggs

A new fruit salad served at fashionable hotels is Maryland Ambrosia. It is made by mingling lobes of oranges, slices of bananas dice of Hawaiian sliced pineapple, of pineapple tid-bits, a few raisins, grapes, and a handful of nuts. The juice from these different fruits may be increased by the addition of sugar a short time before the dish is served. Have the ingredients ice-cold, and, just before sending them to the table, heap whipped cream on the top.

A perfect gelatin dessert should be transparent, brilliant and only stiff enough to hold its form, not solid. Here is the trick. Remember it takes proportionately less time and less gelatin in cold than in hot weather. Gelatin should soak in cold water and be dissolved over hot; never heated to the boiling point, as this renders it sticky. In general, two ounces of gelatin (the amount usually in every package) will jelly two quarts of liquid, but this must be proved by trial, not only of

are straight-lined, with occasionally, the front side-flare.

Among Lanvin's coats are many with deep fur facings from neck-line to hem. Such models usually have, bell-shaped fur cuffs which turn backwards at the wrist. No fur is used upon hemlines.

Although black coats are more frequent than colors, considerable beige and gray tweed models are shown. These are trimmed in matching fox, wolf or other long-haired pelts. New, as winter items, are coats of black a 1 1/2 moire, padded to give warmth. One attractive moire model has melon-shaped collar and sleeves of split mink tails. Paris has not the furs which we have in America and thus the frequent use of animal tails as trimming. Mink tails are split and applied closely together in horizontal effect upon the cloth collar and cuffs. The effect is quite lively. Some moire silk coats use wide revers of white or summer-dyed ermine. The black and white idea in coats also is depicted in fur in several of Lanvin's models.

Mme. Ganna Walzka chose such wraps while we were there. One was a short jacket of black broadtail trimmed with huge revers of white ermine and the other an evening cape combining black seal and white ermine in zig-zag effect.

Among the unusual Lanvin costumes is a suit of black broadtail lamb. The fur jacket is straight-lined and extends to a point below the hips and the fur skirt is scant and straight-lined.

Paris—(LP)—Winter coats displayed this week in Paris by Lanvin consist mostly of cloth models trimmed in fur. Here, as elsewhere, coats are usually straight-lined and are but slightly fur-trimmed. The use of black broadcloth is frequent, the satin-like surface of the broadcloth being relieved by trimming of broadtail, beaver or nutria on collars, cuffs and front facings.

Although Lanvin uses fur sparingly, the idea is new and interesting in many cases. For instance, collars of fur are melon-shaped affairs extending around the neck and tying at the front with ribbon or narrow fur strings. Nearly every Lanvin coat has its fur collar tied at the front with a string-tie effect. Sleeves are designed to harmonize with the melon-shaped collars and thus, though in melonshape from a point near the elbow to the wrist, being fur-trimmed. Otherwise, coats

Among the unusual Lanvin