A. B. Ransdell, managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, says:
"That the most important source of your general information of local, state, national and world events is your newspaper."
"Day by day the press brings to you the newest chapter of that growing scroll, the history of the world."
"You have used so often the phrase, 'I see in the paper' that—" that it has become a matter of reflex action with you, tell you for news something you already had read in your newspaper."
